20th Annual National Tribal Preservation Conference

Suquamish is one of many Indian Tribes in the Pacific Northwest who thrived in their traditional life ways before the arrival of non-Indians. Taking their name from the traditional Lushootseed phrase for “people of the clear salt water” these expert fisherman, canoe builders and basket weavers have lived in harmony with the lands and waterways along Washington’s Central Puget Sound Region for thousands of years.

20th Annual National Tribal Preservation Conference

Welcome to the Conference

September 10, 2018

To Conference Participants and Honored Guests –

Welcome to the 20th Annual National Tribal Preservation Conference, convened by the National Association of Tribal Historic Preservation Officers and hosted by the Suquamish Tribe. We extend our sincere appreciation to the Suquamish Tribe, Chairman Leonard Forsman, and tribal staff and the Clearwater Casino Resort staff for their hospitality and support. The Tribe's overall efforts to provide local jobs – as well as preserve their culture and honor their past – are an encouraging model for all of Indian country.

We look forward to learning more about tribal work in this region, including challenges and success stories in the areas of cultural and natural resource management. It is encouraging to see so many returning THPOs this year and we all look forward to meeting the new THPOs. It is also good to see our Federal partners in attendance. We look forward to the sharing of information and spirited discussions on a variety of topics.

We say it every year and it continues to be true – we hope that you get a chance to interact with your friends and colleagues from earlier meetings, as well as build new working relationships and make new friends. One of the main purposes of the conference is to bring people together to share information, to provide a national showcase of tribal preservation accomplishments, and to celebrate your dedication to preserving American Indian, Alaska Native, and Native Hawaiian cultures.

Thank you for your interest and support of NATHPO over the years and welcome to Suquamish.

20th Annual National Tribal Preservation Conference

From Our Host

September 10, 2018

Dear NATHPO attendees:

On behalf of the Suquamish Tribe, I welcome you to our homeland. Our traditional lands include all of present Kitsap County and beyond and our fishing grounds extended into what is now British Columbia. We traveled these waters in cedar canoes to harvest the salmon and other foods provided to us by the Creator. In 1855, our primary leader, Chief Seattle signed the Treaty of Point Elliott with the United States that established the Port Madison Indian Reservation, the location for this year's NATHPO conference. The Treaty also reserved certain rights, including hunting and fishing, in exchange for title to our lands.

Your work in preserving our cultural sites, sacred places and the ancient stories of your homelands are crucial to our survival as Indian nations. As you already know, Tribes cannot separate our ancestral lands and waters and the animals and plants that live there from the cultural sites we are fighting to protect from destruction. As the former Native American Member and present Vice-Chairman of the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation, I have done my best to bring our traditional values to the table in our efforts to implement the National Historic Preservation Act in a manner that protects our precious cultural resources.

I hope you have a productive week and come together to develop new strategies to face the new challenges that face us in accomplishing our mission to protect our way of life. I hope you have a chance to enjoy the natural beauty of our reservation located here on Salish Sea. I regret not being able to join you here as I am on vacation with my family, but I wish you safe travels home and hope to see you in the future.

Respectfully,

About NATHPO

National Association of Tribal Historic Preservation
Officers

Founded in 1998, the Association is a national non-profit membership organization of Tribal government officials who implement federal and tribal preservation laws. NATHPO's overarching purpose is to support the preservation, maintenance and revitalization of the culture and traditions of Native peoples of the United States. This is accomplished most importantly through the support of Tribal Historic Preservation Programs as acknowledged by the National Park Service.

Tribal Historic Preservation Officers (THPOs) have the responsibilities of State Historic Preservation Officers on tribal lands and advise and work with federal agencies on the management of tribal historic properties. THPOs also preserve and rejuvenate the unique cultural traditions and practices of their tribal communities.

NATHPO activities include monitoring the U.S. Congress, Administration, and state activities on issues that affect all Tribes and monitoring the effectiveness of federally mandated compliance reviews and identification, evaluation, and management of tribal historic properties. Examples of completed and ongoing projects: "Tribal Tourism Toolkit for the Lewis and Clark Bicentennial and Other Tribal Opportunities (2002)," and "Many Nations Media Project - News from the Lewis & Clark Trail (2002-5)," and "Treaty Research Project for Continental U.S. (2001)." NATHPO also offers training and technical assistance on federal historic preservation laws.

Principles and Purposes of NATHPO guided by three main principles)

- Tribal Sovereignty – the inherent right of Indian Nations to self-government
- Confidentiality – recognition of the need to respect the confidentiality of information regarding Native cultural and ceremonial practices and places of religious or cultural significance.
- No boundaries – NATHPO recognizes that the cultural and heritage preservation interests of Indian Nations and their peoples often extend far beyond the boundaries of present-day reservations -- often crossing state and national boundaries -- and stands ready to assist in activities relating to transboundary cultural and environmental issues.

Legal Win for Indian Tribes in the Northwest

In June 2018, the U.S. Supreme Court in a 4-to-4 deadlock let a lower court ruling stand that the State of Washington must make billions of dollars in repairs to roads and culverts that have damaged salmon habitat and population. This decades-long legal battle is of interest in Indian country because of its implications for Indian treaty rights and state sovereignty.

This celebrated annual event started in 1989 for the Indigenous peoples of Washington state, the southeast coast of Alaska, and British Columbia. Canoe families travel in ocean-going canoes -- many made of cedar, others made using more modern techniques and materials -- and visit Native Nations en route to the final host destination. In 2009, the Suquamish Tribe hosted the 20th anniversary Canoe Journey in their new House of Awakened Culture, and had 84 canoes and more than 6,000 guests.

Characterizing Coastal Tribal Cultural Landscapes

In 2015, two federal agencies and three Indian tribes released a guidance document that presents a method for agencies to consult with Indian tribes more effectively and appropriately in advance of any proposed undertakings. Participants included the Bureau of Ocean Energy Management (BOEM) of the Interior Department; the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) of the Commerce Department; the Makah Tribe of Washington; the Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde Community of Oregon; and, the Yurok Tribe of California. Panelists will share their experiences and recommendations from this unique collaboration.

Agency Negligence to Conduct Consultation in “Good Faith”: Experiences from the Pueblo of Zuni

A bevy of statutes, regulations, executive orders, and federal policies direct federal agencies to conduct government-to-government consultation with Indian tribes in good faith. While “good faith” has no formal legal definition, the very term suggests consultation should at least consist of principles and practices of fairness, openness, respect, and honesty. These principles, however, are often neglected in and by all-too-common agency practices. This session discusses Pueblo of Zuni experiences with the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation (BOR) and Bureau of Land Management (BLM) over the last several years to highlight agency failures in good faith consultation and to offer potential ways that federal agencies can better fulfill their consultation and compliance responsibilities to the Pueblo of Zuni specifically and Indian tribes, Alaska Natives, and Native Hawaiians more generally.

Overcoming BLM Institutional Resistance to Landscape TCPs

The Bureau of Land Management's (BLM) implementation of Federal laws and policies under Section 106 - particularly when applied to Traditional Cultural Properties (TCPs) – varies within BLM from state to state, office to office, and even by staff. In addition, even when BLM staff appear to be working formally toward acknowledging and recognizing TCPs, there can be an informal resistance toward designating landscape TCPs. Some of this informal, staff level resistance comes from BLM policies that have been enshrined in BLM national and state level management plans. These management plans contain standards based on archeology, not cultural resource protection. Presentation will include a case study of a TCP in Nevada.

- Rollie Wilson, Partner, Fredericks Peebles & Morgan LLP

3:30pm to 4:15pm

G2G Toolkit

The Arizona State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO) and Salt River Pima-Maricopa Indian Community (SRP-MIC) collaborated on the Government-to-Government Consultation Toolkit (G2G Toolkit), which was designed to facilitate the consultation process for and among Tribes and State and Federal agencies meeting the requirements of the National Historic Preservation Act or State Historic Preservation Act, as well as other state and federal statutes. The G2G Toolkit contains agency and Tribal contact information, consultation protocol, Tribal claims maps, and quick links to Tribal and Agency pages for additional information. The G2G Toolkit was developed by SHPO and SRP-MIC with assistance from the Google Earth Outreach Trainer Network and SWCA Environmental Consultants. Funding was provided by a Cultural Resource Fund (CRF) grant administered by the MICA Group and awarded to SHPO. Additional technical assistance was provided during a Google training workshop with staff from the Arizona State Department of Transportation, State Land Department, Game and Fish Department, Department of Forestry and Fire Management, and State Parks; and by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

In June 2018 NRCS released the final guidance as an NRCS National Instruction. NRCS will discuss the final document and announce an initiative with NATHPO that will assist in training NRCS staff and facilitate meetings between NRCS and Tribal partners to develop ancestral lands consultation agreements.

- 10:45 to 11:45am Negotiating and Enforcing Section 106 Programmatic Agreements
Using a Programmatic Agreement (PA) to implement Section 106 for a particular resource can have pros and cons. PAs are sometimes seen as allowing development to move forward without first properly identifying impacts, avoidance and mitigation. PAs can also be effective in providing a tribe with ongoing oversight and involvement in development activities and providing an ongoing supply of information about development activities. PAs can also be difficult to enforce. Based on a case study of TCPs in Nevada, presentation will identify issues in negotiating and enforcing PAs and recommend solutions.
