STEP 2: KNOW THE RULES

Before buying or leasing property, be sure to discuss your plans with local government agencies that regulate businesses. They can help you avoid costly errors related to these common issues:

- Property Development
- Permitting
- Fire and Building Codes
- Zoning

Economic Development

Properties for lease or sale are regulated differently depending on if they are located inside or outside the city limits.

Contact Allen Mathews Director of Economic Development to determine who you would need to speak with at (252) 973-1213

The Chamber is your go-to source to find service providers in all these areas and more. We'll be happy to connect you with a respected, credible references by calling us at (252) 446-0323

Unfortunately, it's a common misconception that grants and other incentives are widely available to help businesses get started. A few programs do exist to assist with downtown revitalization and industrial recruitment, and the Chamber can lead you to those limited opportunities if they apply to your business.

STEP 3: ASSEMBLE YOUR TEAM

Make sure you surround yourself with experienced professionals who are familiar with our market. Every business is different, but many will eventually need help from some of the following:

- Bank, credit unions, and other sources of financing and credit
- Accountants and Tax Professionals
- Real Estate Experts
- Attorneys familiar with Business, Employment and IP Law
- Architects, builders and contractors
