Weddings. In September my only daughter got married. In October, Past President Bill Gary's only daughter will get married. Truly joyous occasions surrounded by family and friends. Yet it is those connections to others nurtured through the years that created so much of what I found truly meaningful in the celebrations.

When I think of a marriage, my thoughts go to the word “covenant”. As we learned in our contract classes, covenants are unconditional promises to do or not do something. As you think about contracts and covenants, I hope you are inspired to again connect to someone with whom you agreed to stay in touch and let them know you are thinking about them. Those are bonds that should not be broken.

Transitioning now to spotlighting two exceptional individuals whom I am certain were at the top of their contract classes. I highlight Judge Cheryle Gering and Public Sector Attorney Director Mulder:

Cheryle Gering: Judge Gering is the current Presiding Judge of First Judicial Circuit. Long before that appointment, her interest in law was fueled in part when seeing a lawyer's office lined with books and thinking, “a job spent reading is the job for me.” In junior high she interviewed Judge E.W. Hertz for a class project, and in high school she worked in an attorney's office in her hometown for a summer. When she attended the University of South Dakota, she worked in the law school as a work study student. In 1988, she earned her bachelor's degree in political science and criminal justice. All of these experiences reinforced her decision to go into law. She then attended the University of Iowa Law School, graduating in 1991. She returned to South Dakota, working at the Davenport, Evans, Hurwitz & Smith law firm in Sioux Falls as a civil trial lawyer for nearly twenty years. Judge Gering was the first Circuit Court Judge appointed by Governor Daugaard, beginning her position in the First Circuit on July 1, 2011. She became Presiding Judge in the First Circuit in November, 2017. Judge Gering has served in the past on various State Bar Committees, and currently serves on the Judicial Qualifications Commission, the Judicial Training Committee and the Judicial Ethics Committee. Judge Gering's most frequent advice to attorneys who appear in court is “Be prepared”, a truly fitting piece of advice as she certainly is well prepared when attorneys appear before her.

Amber Mulder: Amber Mulder is the Director of Labor and Management for the State of South Dakota Department of Labor and Regulation. Director Mulder hails from Doon, IA. She received her Bachelor's of Arts degree in Criminal Justice and Sociology from the University of Sioux Falls. While working towards her Master's of Public Administration from the University of South Dakota, her administrative law class made her realize law school was where she should be instead. This led her to Hamline University School of Law, where she graduated in 2009. Prior to being appointed as Director, Amber worked in private practice in Iowa for two years and then became a staff attorney and then senior staff attorney for the SD Department of Labor and Regulation providing counsel for the Department particularly in employment law matters, and to the Cabinet Secretary and Unemployment Insurance Division among others. Her appointment as Director occurred in August of 2019, where in addition to providing legal counsel to the Department, she also provides administration of our state labor laws, wage and hour laws, Human Rights Division, and workers' compensation system. During these years, Amber has been actively involved in the State Bar including serving as the Chair of the Labor and Employment Committee for over 4 years and being part of the Administrative Law Committee. About public service, Director Mulder says, "It may not be glamorous work, but every day we are helping people and hopefully making a positive difference in peoples' lives. That's what helps me show up every day - even on the hard days." Thanks Amber; you are a difference maker.

So, as you think about the month of October: reflect on your own marriage and the promises you made to your spouse, reflect on your promises to stay in touch with others, and then act on those promises. It will make a difference!

“Alone we can do so little,
together
we can do so much.”

State Bar of South Dakota YOUNG LAWYER SECTION

Anthony Sutton
YLS President

As bar exam results were issued this past month, I was pleased to see posts on social media of those passing the bar. This led me to reminisce about when I received my bar exam results and reflect on when I was sworn in at the Statewide Swearing-In Ceremony in 2016. Although I never remembered hearing much about the ceremony when I was a law student and I contemplated skipping the ceremony, I am glad that I did not miss it. The Statewide Swearing-In Ceremony is truly something special and a wonderful bookend to the end of a career as a student and an even better launching off point for an individual's career as a member of the South Dakota Bar. And for me personally, it was a special experience that I got to share with my young family, including my wife and then-one month old daughter, and with several of my classmates.

This year's Statewide Swearing In-Ceremony and Nuts & Bolts CLE will be on October 21, 2022, in Pierre. The Nuts & Bolts CLE will begin at 9 am and will include lunch for all who attend. The Statewide Swearing-In Ceremony will begin at 3 pm in the Capitol Rotunda. A copy of the agenda for the Nuts and Bolts CLE and the invite to the Statewide Swearing-In Ceremony are included as part of this month's newsletter.

I know many young lawyers, especially those just starting jobs or clerkships might not feel that they can ask for a day off to attend the Nuts & Bolts CLE and the Statewide Swearing-In Ceremony. To those recent bar exam passers and young lawyers, I would encourage you to ask as you will not regret it. The CLE we have lined up this year for the Nuts & Bolts is top notch and will feature, the Honorable Chief Justice Steven R. Jensen, the Honorable Roberto A. Lange, John Burke, Bob Morris, and Tony Teesdale, just to name a few presenters. Chief Justice Jensen will also preside over the Swearing-In Ceremony and administer the oath to all who attend.

Because many bar exam passers might feel that they cannot ask for a day off in October, I want to put the onus on the rest of us as members of the bar and employers of new lawyers to encourage them to attend the Nuts & Bolts CLE and the Statewide Swearing-In Ceremony. Lawyers who were recently sworn in or plan to delay their admission due to a clerkship can also attend—and are highly encouraged to attend—the Statewide Swearing-In Ceremony and the Nuts & Bolts CLE. Family members and current Members of the Bar are also encouraged to attend the Statewide Swearing-In Ceremony and welcome some of South Dakota's newest lawyers.

During both the Nuts & Bolts CLE and the Statewide Swearing-In Ceremony, there will be discussions regarding mentorship and specifically regarding the Hagemann-Morris Mentorship Coin Program. This year, the YLS Board is looking to revamp the mentor program to try to make it easier for both interested mentees and interested mentors to apply. While additional details on our efforts will be discussed in future newsletters, I wanted to include links for both potential mentees (mentee application) and mentors (mentor application) to apply to participate in the program. The Mentorship Program is a great way to support our new members of the South Dakota Bar and provide them with the guidance they need to succeed. The Hagemann-Morris Mentorship Coin Program is another great opportunity for established members of the bar to encourage the young lawyers they interact with to apply for the program. If anyone has issues with the links and is interested in participating in the Mentorship Program as either a mentee or mentor, please feel free to contact me (anthony@janklowabdallah.com) and I will be happy to help get you started.

I look forward to seeing many of our newest lawyers, their families, and other members of the Bar on October 21st in Pierre!

DEAN'S LIST : NEWS FROM THE LAW SCHOOL

October generally brings exam results, and this year is no different. For July of 2022, the first-time pass rate for Law School graduates in South Dakota was 79%. That number is the starting point to assess bar exam results, not the end. We are waiting for results from other jurisdictions to determine our total first-time pass rate for the Class of 2022. More important, however, is Ultimate Bar Passage (the percentage of students who took and passed a bar exam within 2 years of graduation) because that is the number that the ABA looks at for accreditation. I also think it gives a more complete picture of bar success than first time rates alone. For the classes of 2019 and 2020, the Law School's ultimate bar pass rate has been 94 and 87 percent. Our graduates are passing the bar exam.

While bar exam outcomes are very important, so is the bar exam process. Many lawyers have little reason to be familiar with the mechanics of the bar exam, but it is helpful as you consider the results. I want to spend a little time in this month's column talking about that process.

While the National Conference of Bar Examiners prepares most exam materials, each jurisdiction determines the content and grading of their exams. South Dakota requires a scaled score of 133 on the MBE (the 200-question multiple-choice portion) and a cumulative score of 75 percent or higher on the MEE/MPT (the essay and practice activity portions). More than half of states require a higher passing score; three-quarters require a score equal to or higher than South Dakota's. Among neighboring states, only North Dakota sets a lower passing score than South Dakota.

South Dakota does require a separate passing score on each portion of the exam. South Dakota rewards exceptional performance on the MEE/MPT by awarding up to three MBE points based on scores of 80, 85, and 90 respectively. This "bonus point" rule was implemented in 2019 and has made the difference in passing for several applicants since then.

There has been some argument that South Dakota's scoring system places applicants here at a disadvantage. I disagree. Many other jurisdictions use a scaled scoring system to grade the MEE/MPT portion of the exam rather than South Dakota's true percentage scoring approach. In a scaling jurisdiction, all essays are graded by distribution in groups one through six (with one being the lowest score and six the highest). The purpose of this structure is to create a forced distribution of scores on the exams. This is unlike South Dakota, where, in theory, every exam could get a 90%. Once the distribution is made, the mean and standard deviation of scores for both the MBE and MEE/MPT are determined. The MEE/MPT scores are then adjusted so that they have an identical mean and standard deviation. (you can get more detail about scaling from the NCBE here: <https://thebarexaminer.ncbex.org/article/equating-and-scaling/the-testing-column-3/>). South Dakota's essay scoring system is different, but nothing about it places South Dakota applicants at a disadvantage in comparison to the scoring system used in other jurisdictions. In fact, Mark Albanese, the former Director of Testing and Research for the NCBE has clearly stated, "combining the scaled essay scores with the MBE scores will not have an impact on the percentage of examinees who fail..." (<https://thebarexaminer.ncbex.org/article/> equating-and-scaling/the-testing-column-scaling-its-not-just-for-fish-or-mountains/). Having overseen the testing of the test for many years, Mr. Albanese refutes the suggestion that South Dakota's method of scoring the MEE/MPT portion of the exam somehow drives down pass rates.

The reality is also that among applicants who do not pass the exam, they overwhelmingly fail to pass the MBE, not the MEE/MPT. For example, in the February exam administration, 90% of the applicants who did not pass the exam DID pass the MEE/MPT. In the July administration, it was just under 90%. As part of the NextGen Bar initiative, NCBE is moving away from the MBE in the coming years. I continue to believe that the NextGen changes hold real potential to make the bar exam process better across the country. In the interim, when bar pass rates are not where we want, it is not because of the structure of South Dakota's exam. Applicants overwhelmingly succeed on the essay portion of the bar exam.

I have also heard the claim that bar pass rates in South Dakota have "never recovered" from their fall in the middle of the last decade. They have—both for USD graduates and in the jurisdiction as a whole. As I noted above, the pass rates for the Class of 2019 reached 94% and the Class of 2020 reached 87%. The Class of 2021 is currently at 86%. For all South Dakota applicants (USD and other schools), South Dakota's total pass rate has beaten the national average every year since 2018. You can see that data on the NCBE website: <https://thebarexaminer.ncbex.org/2021-statistics/ten-year-summary-of-bar-passage-rates-overall-and-first-time-2012-2021/>. This graph shows the relationship between South Dakota's pass rates and the national average pretty clearly: <https://libguides.law.usd.edu/sd-bar-exam-pass-rates>.

Bar exam results are indisputably important. They are extremely important and extremely personal to those applying for admission. It is also indisputably true that it is important to assess results through an evaluation of accurate and complete data over time and not any one administration as well as with an informed and open-minded consideration of the testing process. It remains critical to the mission of the Law School to prepare and support our graduates for bar admission, and that we work with the Court and the Bar to continue make our processes better. It is unlikely that any assessment or outcome will ever be "perfect," but it is entirely possible that working together as a profession, we can continue to refine our admissions process to be fair, protective of the public, and aligned with minimum professional competence.

How the State Bar

Ethics Committee works

Identifying and responding to ethical issues that arise in practice can be challenging and frightening. The Ethics Committee of the South Dakota Bar is available to help all lawyers in South Dakota through those questions.

It is important to remember that the Ethics Committee is NOT the Disciplinary Board. The Ethics Committee exists not to identify and discipline ethical violations, but to confidentially assist lawyers in achieving compliance with the Rules of Professional Responsibility. As a result, there are some rules about how the Ethics Committee operates that are important to know:

Requests are confidential

The Ethics Committee will provide an opinion about concrete ethical questions to lawyers admitted to the State Bar of South Dakota. Action taken in reliance on a formal ethics opinion of the Committee is protected against discipline. Opinion requests are held confidential, and formal written opinions are de-identified to the greatest degree possible.

Questions Must relate to Your Own Conduct

The Ethics Committee can only provide an opinion about the conduct of the lawyer making the request or another lawyer with whom that lawyer practices in partnership or similar association. Opinions cannot be sought about the conduct of opposing or unaffiliated lawyers lest they be used as swords rather than shields.

No HYPOTHETICALS Please

Requests for opinions need to be presented in concrete situations, with a description of the operative facts involved. Those facts will be assumed true by the Ethics Committee and the opinion limited to them. It is difficult to address hypothetical questions, so requests need to be tied to an actual factual scenario the requesting lawyer presently faces or is likely to.

send to chair with deadline

Opinion requests can be directed to the chair via email: Sander.Morehead@woodsfuller.com and are then circulated for discussion within the Ethics Committee. The Committee endeavors to be timely, so it is useful to note any time pressures for the opinion.

We are here to help

Lastly, although formal opinions are common, the Committee is always happy to try to brainstorm an ethical issue with lawyers. Feel free to email or call the chair or another Committee member directly.

Opinions of the Committee over the years are collected on the State Bar Website. They make an excellent starting place to research an ethical question. The Committee also can steer lawyers to ethics opinions from the ABA, other states, and other ethics resources that may be helpful. Most importantly, the Ethics Committee exists to be a resource for members of the Bar. Please never hesitate to get in touch with questions or suggestions of how the Committee can best serve you.

THIS MESSAGE IS PROVIDED TO MEMBERS OF THE STATE BAR BY ETHICS COMMITTEE CHAIR, SANDER MOREHEAD. OTHER MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE INCLUDE: CAMEO ANDERS, JAMES BILLION, JEFFREY BRATKIEWICZ, JENNIFER BUNKERS, TRACEY DOLLISON DECKER, KIMBERLY DORSETT, DAN FRITZ, ALECIA FULLER, NEIL FULTON, ERIC KELDERMAN, YVETTE LAFRENTZ, CHRIS MADSEN, DONALD MCCARTY, KIMBERLY PEHRSON, MIKE SCHAFER, THOMAS SIMMONS, RYAN SNELL, CASSIDY STALLEY.

IS IT OKAY FOR A LAWYER TO TEXT WITH CLIENTS?

by: Mark Bassingthwaite

Is it okay for a lawyer to text with clients? This question is one that keeps coming up. The short answer is yes; but just because you can do something, doesn't mean it's always a good idea. I say this because texting is ubiquitous in our culture. Instead of taking the time to compose an email or pick up a phone, it takes far less time to send a quick text at any time of the day or night regardless of the setting. It's such an easy thing to do without giving it any thought, and therein lies the problem. When a lawyer fails to factor in the associated ethical and risk management concerns, a decision to enter into a text message exchange with a client can in the end prove to be a bad idea.

What are the ethical and risk management concerns with texting?

It all starts with Comment [8] to ABA Model Rule 1.1 Competency, which reminds lawyers that they are to "keep abreast of changes in the law and its practice to include the benefits and risks associated with relevant technology." When lawyers communicate with clients via text messaging, they need to be thinking about the ramifications of doing so.

Speaking personally, I think a decision to provide a cell number to more than a select few clients is a bad idea unless you have established defined boundaries for its use upfront. It's a wellness issue for me. I'm not a fan of 24/7 availability because everyone needs downtime. The problem is when people send a text, they are usually expecting an immediate response, even if it's after their lawyer has gone home for the day. In the absence of predefined boundaries, the ability to manage client expectations and benefit from some well-deserved recuperative time can quickly become a challenge.

The informality of text messaging and the fact that this type of communication often occurs on the fly is also of concern. Short and succinct text messages are problematic if their purpose is to pass along legal advice or if clients are relying on them to facilitate their decision-making process. For example, using text messaging as the way to pass along thoughts on the terms of a settlement offer or having a client discuss key terms that need to be included in a contract would be a bad idea. At a minimum, it's an inefficient use of time that can needlessly result in a larger bill than the client might be expecting all due to the need to send multiple texts to make sure you have all the information you need as well as to confirm the client has correctly understood the exchange. As a risk manager, I strongly believe such substantive discussions are better had in person or over the phone if the circumstances permit.

Compounding the situation is the struggle some lawyers and/or staff have when it comes to capturing and preserving text message exchanges as part of the client file. Remember, in the context of a malpractice claim or disciplinary matter, what isn't documented can all too quickly become something that didn't happen or wasn't said; and now you've got a new problem. So, if anyone at your firm is unable or unwilling to capture and preserve any and all substantive text messages, then I'd seriously consider limiting their use of texting to informational courtesy exchanges only. For example, a text that confirms an appointment time, lets a client know the lawyer is running late, or explains where to meet at the courthouse would be fine. Anything beyond that would not be.

One concern that is easily overlooked is in not knowing if the text messages being sent are actually being received and then read by the correct party. For example, do you take the time to stop to think about who might have access to the client's cell phone or ever wonder if the client is having their text messages show up on the family computer at home? Making matters worse, how would you know that a client has texted you an urgent message when your phone is off? What might happen if the client assumes you received it and trusts that you will promptly address the matter when you didn't and thus couldn't? Could this be a problem? It already has been for others.

Even if you take steps to make sure every text message is received and only read by the intended recipient, this doesn't mean you have responsibly followed through on your duty to maintain client confidences. For example, messages sent by way of the widely used SMS and MMS messaging methods are unsecured when in transit, which means these messages can be read by anyone who intercepts them. And while iMessages sent to other Apple users are encrypted while in transit, they are unencrypted when sent to SMS users.

The final concern I wish to discuss is the BYOD (Bring Your Own Device) problem. In the absence of a policy that proactively addresses using personal devices for texting clients, staff and attorneys can all too easily step out of bounds. For example, the use of free third-party apps such as WeChat or WhatsApp may contain vulnerabilities that cybercriminals can exploit. A much better approach would be to have everyone use a paid for business use enterprise-based solution. Here's another way to think about the BYOD problem. For many firms, allowing staff and attorneys to use personal email for work is strictly prohibited. Why should text messaging be any different? It shouldn't.

I share all the above to underscore the importance of and the whys behind Comment [8] to ABA Model Rule 1.1. In my mind, the benefits of texting are self-evident. It's the risks that aren't; and as a lawyer, how can you ever address any of the risks if you fail to put sufficient energy and time into determining what the risks actually are? There are ways to have a secure instant message exchange and ways to make sure the record of the exchange is captured, preserved, and properly secured. Signal or Kenect are just two examples of how to do so. If you have no idea where to start, or just want a little professional guidance, I suggest you reach out to your IT support because there is no one size fits all solution.

Once you have a handle on the associated risks, I would encourage you to establish written text messaging guidelines, to include an explanation as to the whys behind them and see that all staff and attorneys are properly trained on how to follow them. This can be an effective way to manage the risks that come with text messaging. Of course, this assumes everyone abides by the rules, which means they will need to be enforced. If that's not a hill you wish to climb, then an alternative might be to place significant limitations on what can be shared via text message, when it can be shared, and on what devices. Regardless, don't allow an "anything-goes attitude" to turn into your firm's default text messaging policy. Those kinds of policies rarely play out well over the long term. Just saying...

A Quick Tip

TO SIMPLIFY YOUR DIGITAL WORLD

Organizing your professional life can be done in small bits and pieces. A good place to start will allow you to easily manage the digital noise and distraction in your life and your practice. For example, do you ever find yourself sitting at a computer, trying to access a website, only to get the dreaded message that your password is incorrect? Do you want to stop wasting time searching for passwords, logins, account information, and countless other bits of private information? If you don't have one already, let me tell you about one of the most powerful and simple tools at your disposal: password managers.

Organizing your digital world will streamline your personal and professional life, not to mention save you time and money. For example, according to Scott Sonnenschein, co-author of the book "Joy at Work," the average person has about 130 online accounts per email address, and forgetting the right username and password is a major source of frustration. If you've ever forgotten your password, you've gone through the gauntlet of trying different combinations of user IDs and passwords only to eventually give up and simply change your password. And it's not just you. The loss in productivity from lost things adds up to about one week per year per employee of lost time, and the time related to lost passwords alone amounts to at least $420 per employee per year. Id.

Some of you might already be using a password manager, and I suspect a good number of you are not. While helping lawyers organize their offices, I've seen lots of random pieces of paper, notebooks, and sticky notes with password information on them and found them in all corners of a single office. With the ever-increasing technology tools we are required to use in our practices, as well as those that are a good idea to use, you need a secure and reliable system to protect your information and your client information.

Password managers are apps that secure and sync passwords within your "vault" across any browser, device, or desktop. They can initially scan your devices for usernames and passwords, save new passwords as you browse, and create complex passwords for your use. Many will alert you to security breaches related to internet sites you use, autofill forms, and allow secure sharing.

Even if you have an assistant who typically handles all the electronic filing and service, the billing, trust account, and tax information and payments, you still need to prepare for the day when that person is unexpectedly unavailable for an extended time. Having secure shareable office-related passwords for your operational systems is crucial. Password managers can be a powerful tool to help ensure you stay “on top of” all the technology used in your office.

I use the app Dashlane for my business and personal passwords. It’s got a free version which is robust enough to address all of the features described. Other top-rated password manager apps include NordPass, Keeper, 1Password, RoboForm, Bitwarden, and Norton, to name just a few. (I have no affiliation with any of the apps identified here and do not receive any income from recommending them to you.) Whichever you choose, choose one now – before you experience a catastrophic loss – and be sure it is installed on all your devices.

The speed at which technology changes and new websites become a “must,” makes the use of relevant technology an essential part of every law practice. Before closing, I would be remiss in not reminding the reader that the South Dakota Rules of Professional Conduct, begin with the obligation to provide “competent representation” which “requires the legal knowledge, skill, thoroughness and preparation reasonably necessary for the representation.” Rule 1.1. Although our state is one of a handful that have not adopted ABA Comment 8,¹ we each have an obligation to take all necessary steps to maintain the security of client information, documents, and discovery.

Requiring and using a password manager is one quick step you can take to help manage those security risks.
