Six Priorities for the Sandwich Generation

The “Sandwich Generation”—adults caring for aging parents as well as children—faces several stressful challenges that come from trying to juggle everyone’s needs. One of those top stressors: finances, such as how to cover education and health care costs and still save enough for retirement. The demands often compete with one another—which is why setting clear priorities is so important.

Here are six tips for setting those priorities to help you deliver the support your loved ones need—without shortchanging yourself.

1 Take care of your future first. Saving enough for retirement should be your top priority. You have to take care of your needs before you help your parents and your children.

2 Create or update your investment plan. Create an investment plan that will help you balance your financial goals with the needs of your children and parents. Review your budget, analyze your expenses, and set savings targets to help you prioritize planning for an upcoming expense, such as college costs or long-term care for your parents.

3 Review your insurance coverage. Protecting your assets is always a good idea, but it’s even more important when you have two generations depending on you. Make sure you have enough life insurance in case something happens to you to pay off your mortgage and other debt, and to help cover the future living expenses of your dependents. And don’t forget disability insurance: More than a quarter of today’s 20-year-olds will become disabled before they retire, according to the Council for Disability Awareness.*

4 Check in on your parents’ financial health. Though it might seem awkward, talk to your parents about their wishes for the future and their financial health. What financial assets and expenses do they have? How do they plan to meet their financial obligations? Do they have a plan to cover the costs of long-term care? This conversation can help you determine how much financial support you will need to provide.

Also, make sure your parents have done adequate estate planning, and ask for copies of their will or trust, durable power of attorney, healthcare power of attorney, and advance healthcare directive. Make sure your own estate-planning documents are complete and updated as well.

5 Consider reducing financial support for grown children. Many parents still help their grown children with their finances—sometimes even to their detriment. Many young Baby Boomers are still paying their kids’ expenses, cell phone bill, or car insurance. If this is the case for you, talk with your children about the steps they can take to start becoming more financially independent.

... talk with your children about the steps they can take to start becoming more financially independent.

6 Look for ways to help reduce your taxes. In some cases, you may be able to claim your aging parents as dependents. Also check with a tax advisor to see if their medical expenses qualify as a tax deduction. Another way that may benefit your financial bottom line is to set up a 529 Plan account for your children’s education expenses.

Holiday Decorating

#HolidaySafety

'Tis the Season for decorating your home and workplace with holiday sparkle, fancy trees, bright lights, garland and beautiful ornaments. But let's not get too excited about Santa coming and forget about our safe practices at work and at home! Holiday decor often requires the use of portable ladders and creates an increased demand for electrical power. Improper use of ladders and electrical cords during the holiday season could result in personal injury and/or property loss. Pull the plug on hazards by following these holiday decorating safety tips.

LADDER SAFETY

- Don't stand on furniture to hang your holiday décor. Use the right ladder for the job!
- Always place ladders on level ground, avoid over reaching, and keep your body centered to avoid falling.
- Make sure your ladder extends three feet above the roofline when climbing onto the roof to ensure stability.
- When using a step ladder, ensure the metal spreaders are locked in the open position and never stand higher than the second step from the top cap.

DON'T GET ZAPPED!

- Check the rating on your extension cords to make sure they meet the power needs (i.e. amperage) for the intended purpose.
- Properly inspect power cords to ensure there is no damage to the cord or insulation, such as cuts, bare wires, etc.
- Plug outdoor extension cords, lights or decorations into outlets protected by ground fault circuit interrupters (GFCIs) or use portable outdoor GFCIs.

Happy Holidays from all of us at the
