A Focus on Flood Insurance and Lumber

With Congress in its August recess, members are encouraged to visit their lawmakers in their home districts and seek action on two issues – flood insurance and lumber.

The National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP) must be reauthorized by Sept. 30. Congress requires all properties within the 100-year floodplain that are purchased with a federally backed mortgage to carry flood insurance. So it is essential that the program gets reauthorized in a timely manner.

NAHB has been at the forefront of this issue, working with lawmakers on a viable, long-term bill. We have reached an agreement with the House Financial Services Committee to craft legislation that will provide a five-year reauthorization that will keep the NFIP fiscally sound and let builders provide safe and affordable housing.

This is a huge win for NAHB, and brings us a big step closer to a program that protects home builders and home owners living in the floodplain.

So it is important that you urge your House members to support the 21st Century Flood Reform Act (H.R. 2874) and ask them to get the reauthorization passed before the Sept. 30 deadline.

Meanwhile, leaders of the Senate Banking Committee have released a similar bipartisan bill to keep the flood insurance program funded for six years. Urge your senators to support the National Flood Insurance Program Reauthorization Act of 2017 (S. 1571)

Lumber

NAHB denounced a June 26 decision by the Commerce Department to impose a preliminary 6.87% anti-dumping duty on Canadian lumber imports on top of the 19.88% countervailing duties announced in April.

The softwood lumber trade dispute between the United States and Canada increased tariffs and have created uncertainty in the marketplace. In turn, this has pushed lumber prices up by as much as 30%.

Without resolution, the increased cost of this critical building material will have a severe effect on housing affordability and force potential buyers out of the market.

NAHB supports trade policies that allow access to the highest quality building materials, at a stable and predictable price.

Ask your representatives and senators to work with U.S. Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross to find a solution and protect home building from the cost of unnecessary trade restrictions.

Check out these tips on how to set up meetings with your members of Congress in their home districts. For more information on flood insurance, contact Jessica Hall at 800-368-5242 x8570; Contact Alex Strong at x8279 to learn more on the lumber issue.

Gypsum Prices Continue to Climb

BY DAVID LOGAN
AUGUST 10, 2017

The prices of gypsum, softwood lumber, and ready-mix concrete increased by 1.4%, 0.6%, and 0.3%, respectively, in July according to the latest Producer Price Index (PPI) release by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. In contrast, the price paid for OSB fell 3.8%, its largest monthly decline since February 2016.

Gypsum prices rose 1.4% in July following a 1.3% increase in June. The final demand price index for gypsum products has increased 7.5% in 2017 and 13.7% since January 2016.

The OSB price index fell for just the second time in 2017. Prices also declined in June, but by just 0.4%.

The drop in the index—which runs counter to buyers' experiences—is due to the fact that it includes waferboard, a reconstituted wood product in which the layers of flakes are not oriented. According to Random Lengths data, the price of OSB actually increased by 8.1% in July.

The price of softwood lumber increased by just 0.6% in July which, like the OSB price index, runs contrary to builder's experience. Though the PPI increase was relatively small, the direction is consistent with our assertion last month that the softwood lumber index would revert to the upward trend during most of 2017. The magnitude of the increase is inconsistent with the 7.8% jump in the Random Lengths Framing Lumber Composite Price (FLCP) over the month of July (below). The disparities between the two measures are largely due to technical reasons outlined in last month's PPI post.

Increasing by 0.3%, the change in prices paid for ready-mix concrete (seasonally adjusted) was again in line with its average since 2000. Prices increased nearly three-quarters of the months over that period by an average of 0.3%.

The economy-wide PPI declined 0.1% in July after a 0.1% increase in June. Over 80% of the decrease was driven by a 0.2% decline in prices paid for services. Like the full PPI index, prices for final demand goods also fell 0.1%, reversing the 0.1% increase seen in June. Final demand prices for core goods (i.e. goods excluding food and energy) decreased 0.1% after eight consecutive monthly increases. Prices for final demand core goods less trade services was unchanged.

A major factor in the decrease in prices for goods was a 1.4% decline in prices paid for gasoline, marking the second consecutive month in which gasoline prices fell more than 1.0%. Conversely, the price of grains moved significantly higher, up 17.1% over the month. As noted above, the index for final demand services edged down 0.1% after increasing over each of the four prior months. The decline was led by a 5.8% drop in the margins for the wholesaling of chemicals and allied products.

NEW HOME APPRAISAL TRAINING

The best way for you to get the best, most accurate appraisal is to know the facts! That's why the Home Builders Association of Alabama is offering a brand new training that brings builders, realtors, appraisers and lenders together in the same setting to learn how appraisals are conducted, how appraisals affect the industry, and how builders and realtors can help appraisers assign the best value to new homes. If you want a better, more accurate appraisal, then do not miss this opportunity to participate.

The HBAA has partnered with nationally renowned appraisal experts Buddy Eslava and Mandell Tillman to provide this one-of-a-kind program. Together, they will explain the process while allowing for open, direct, and meaningful discussions among participants about the appraisal process. If you are involved in the construction, financing, sale, or appraisal of new homes, you can't afford to miss this unique educational opportunity.
