Regional Leadership During a Global Pandemic

2020 HAS BEEN A YEAR UNLIKE ANY OTHER. The COVID-19 pandemic has dramatically impacted our business community, and we are all working hard to recover.

Early in the pandemic, the Lansing Regional Chamber of Commerce (LRCC) recognized that we had a vital role in helping our community through the crisis. Our focus has been on providing as many resources as possible to support our region's business community to maintain strong, viable operations. We are proud of our efforts and the various ways we have stepped up to help businesses, non-profits, municipalities, and the entire Lansing region navigate COVID-19.

As the voice of business in Greater Lansing, the LRCC recognized that our role in providing regional leadership was never more important than during the challenging times we have dealt with over the past several months. The LRCC took the lead to form the RELAUNCH Greater Lansing Task Force, a coalition of business, education, government, and healthcare professionals. The RELAUNCH Task Force was dedicated to developing a comprehensive strategy for sectors within the Lansing region to reopen and re-engage business safely and successfully. We created a resource guide and website that serves as a one-stop experience for organizations seeking the latest information regarding COVID-19.

We are incredibly proud of our leadership work in the advocacy arena. Most notably, the opening of the Coleman Road extension, a $7.6 million project that will improve traffic flow and open new development opportunities in northern Ingham and southern Clinton counties. Our political action committee, the LRC-PAC, enjoyed a banner year, as 95% of our endorsed candidates were elected in 2020.

“As the voice of business in Greater Lansing, the LRCC recognized that our role in providing regional leadership was never more important than during the challenging times we have dealt with the past several months.”

Our events and programming teams refused to be deterred by the setbacks brought forth by the pandemic. We quickly shifted our focus to providing our valued networking opportunities in a virtual environment. Our more than 30 virtual programs have reached more than 4,700 participants. We have also recognized the strong business and community leadership through our Annual Dinner, ATHENA, 10 Over the Next Ten, and Celebration of Regional Growth Award programs.

The LRCC marketing and communications team continues to expand our unique branding opportunities, connecting and building awareness. In 2020, we have increased our social media platforms that now reach nearly 20,000 users and upgraded our FOCUS Magazine to include a new, easy-to-use flipbook, digital technology.

These extraordinary efforts to support our business community would not be possible without the support of our investors. 2020 has shown us that there is no better time to be a member of the Lansing Regional Chamber of Commerce. Your continued investment supports the regional leadership we bring to help your business connect, grow, and thrive. As we work together, especially in tough times, we will continue to build a prosperous region.

All the best to you for a strong finish in 2020, safe and happy holidays to you and your families and here's to a healthy, productive, and profitable 2021! ■

FLEXcity Fitness Owners Honored as Recipients of 2021 ATHENA PowerLink Award

APPLICATIONS CURRENTLY BEING ACCEPTED FOR 2022 APL AWARD

BY CASSADEE JACKSON, KOLT COMMUNICATIONS, INC.

FLEXCITY FITNESS OWNERS, JENNY QUINN AND TRISTA PARISIAN, are the recipients of the 2021 Lansing Regional Chamber of Commerce (LRCC) ATHENA PowerLink Award (APL). APL is a national mentoring program that connects selected women business owners with a skilled advisory panel. The specified panel of advisors will donate an estimated $50,000 value of business consultation services to help the business to achieve the next level of success.

“We are truly honored to be the 2021 recipients of the ATHENA PowerLink Award,” said Trista Parisian, co-owner of FLEXcity Fitness. “We just moved into our dream studio and expanded our sessions for virtual and live-streaming.”

“To have the opportunity to work with the advisory panel will help us further in the company’s development and growth,” said Jenny Quinn.

“Trista and Jenny will be exceptional participants in the ATHENA PowerLink program,” said Tim Daman, president and CEO, LRCC. “They have a terrific vision of where they want to go in the next few years. Their panel of PowerLink mentors will help them shape and execute a refined strategy to take their business to the next level.”

The two Lansing area natives founded FLEXcity Fitness and developed their concept of FLEX – an instructor-led small group training method intended to make exercise exciting, efficient, and effective. Each session is different and will never be the same. The only pattern in this studio is flex, sweat, stretch, repeat!

“We were excited for FLEXcity Fitness to receive the ATHENA PowerLink Award this year,” said Jane Mitchell, owner and CEO of Jungle Jane Promotions and ATHENA PowerLink Award board member. “A big factor in this selection was knowing that Jenny and Trista are willing to openly discuss their goals for Flexcity Fitness and the obstacles impacting their ability to reach those goals. They are willing to productively utilize the panels advice.”

FLEXcity Fitness welcomes all levels of experience. The unmatched interval-based training studio offers a unique blend of training concepts to achieve long-lasting, noticeable results. The flex, sweat, stretch method is used to transform the body, increase stamina and endurance, and improve flexibility. These sessions are versatile and can be performed by anyone, anytime, and anywhere.

The FLEXCity Fitness studio is located at 2222 E. Michigan Ave. in Lansing, Michigan 28912. For more information about FLEXCity Fitness call (517) 208-4037, email flexcityfitness@gmail.com, or visit flexcityfitness.com.

- 51% of business is owned and actively managed by a woman or women
- At least two years in operation
- At least two full-time employees, including applicant
- At least $250,000 in annual gross revenues for a manufacturing or retail business; or at least $100,000 in annual gross revenues for a service business
- Clearly defined business objectives and specific reasons for seeking an advisory panel

The LRCC is currently accepting applications for the 2022 ATHENA PowerLink and the 2020 ATHENA Leadership Awards. The ATHENA Leadership Award honors individuals who strive towards the highest levels of professional accomplishment, excel in their chosen field, have devoted time and energy to their community, and pave paths for other women to follow. It also celebrates the potential of all women as leaders of the community and recognizes those who support them.

- ATHENA Leadership Award: Jan. 22, 2021

Applications for both awards may be found at www.lansingchamber.org/athena-awards. ■

Leadership Lansing Cohort Learns Elected Officials Really CAN Get Along

A STEADY DIET OF THE NATIONAL NEWS

can leave the impression that the government is little more than perpetual gridlock and a lack of civility. Several state and local elected officials told a recent Leadership Lansing forum that they regularly work with other elected officials from different areas and political affiliations in the interest of advancing issues that benefit the entire region or state.

The panel discussion was held as part of a Leadership Lansing government day forum, held on Nov. 10. Panelists include State Representative Sarah Anthony, Delta Township Trustee Fonda Brewer, Lansing City Council member Patricia Spitzley, and Clinton County Commissioner Ken Mitchell. The program was moderated by Steve Japinga, vice president, public affairs, Lansing City Council. Panelists said they regularly work with officials from different municipalities and political affiliations to promote issues that benefit the entire region or the state. A recent example cited was the completion and opening of the Coleman Road extension. This $7.6 million infrastructure project brought together republicans and democrats and municipalities representing urban, suburban, and rural areas.

The 25 participants in the 2020-2021 Leadership Lansing cohort are being exposed to a diverse group of local leaders, issues, and organizations that make up the fabric of the region. The seven-month program is designed to equip the next generation of community leaders and runs through May 2021. ■

Agree to Disagree: Restoring Civility in Politics and Society

ONE OF THE MOST DISTURBING TRENDS IN RECENT ELECTIONS has been the loss of civility and the negative, even angry tone of rhetoric that has infiltrated every aspect of the political process. Now that the 2020 campaign has ended, FOCUS Magazine decided to ask two political consultants for their views on why this trend exists and how to restore civility. We spoke with Adrian Hemond of Grassroots Midwest, a Democrat, and John Selleck of Harbor Strategic, a Republican.

Hemond

FOCUS: What do you believe caused the breakdown of civility during this election?

Adrian: Civility has been breaking down in American society, politics, and culture for decades. The causes are many, but fundamentally the behaviors we see in American politics are just reflective of American society: we're very disconnected from each other. The more isolated we are, the less incentive to change, innovate, and compromise.

John: American politics has been on a path to our status for a long time. Technology, Twitter, unthinkable sums of advertising spending and the advertiser's ability to find us no matter which screen we are on means we are constantly stoked with aggressive messaging. You cannot even go to a restaurant without a TV on the wall yelling at you. In this environment, elected officials cannot find common ground long enough to make progress on policy solutions, creating a build-up of citizen frustration vented in increasing force and making people susceptible to extremes.

FOCUS: In your role, how do you separate the policy from the person?

Adrian: The short (and maybe funny?) answer is I get paid to do it! But honestly, it is not that hard to understand another person's perspective, even people you disagree with about the most important issues. I don't think you separate the policy and the person. I have all sorts of unpopular views, so I've grown accustomed to dealing with people I disagree with, I guess. I founded Grassroots Midwest in 2013 as a bipartisan firm for a reason: actually, understanding different perspectives and outlooks makes organizations more powerful.

John: I worked on the policy staffs of Gov. Engler and two Michigan speakers of the House, so it is easier for me to keep my eyes on the prize—the public policy. What the general public must try to be aware of is that they are being fed specifically-tailored, bite-size morsels of information (or misinformation) on social media and cable news meant to play to your biases and emotions. That is the downside of social media and a million TV channels which allow us to move into virtual neighborhoods where few people disagree with us. And, while there, we spend a lot of time talking about the personalities of politicians and accompanying emotions, not so much the policy. Making the effort to read beyond your bubble is key to understanding our real-life neighbors.

FOCUS: In your opinion, what do you think we need to do to restore civility in our country?

Adrian: We must talk to each other, for starters, and social media doesn't count. That includes talking to people we disagree with about the most fundamental things. You don't change people's minds with politics. Politics is how you keep score. You change people's minds by talking to them, by understanding them, and by making them care. Campaign ads and social media posts don't do any of those things. In some ways, politics is the easy part. Making people care about the perspectives of others is hard.

Selleck

John: It starts with each of us, as individuals, making a renewed effort to let others know that "I hear you" and showing that we can co-exist with someone we disagree with. Being aware of efforts on social media, in political advertising and from politicians to rile us up. And, being involved with professional groups like the Lansing Regional Chamber of Commerce, which does a wonderful job providing the figurative space for people of all political persuasions to work on issues that benefit all of us.

FOCUS: Can you share examples of how you both have worked together on projects?

Adrian: Funny you should mention that. Mr. Selleck and I do paid speaking engagements together for business, labor, and interest group audiences to give them bipartisan analysis about elections, policy, and politics, and to talk about bridging divides. We also work together on a grassroots outreach project in the defense manufacturing industry.

John: In the past, we worked on opposite sides in the House of Representatives. We became friends over the last few years, against all political odds, because reporters were asking us for our partisan analysis of the issues so often that we realized we both enjoy explaining daily political happenings in a way that educates people who have jobs in the real world (not politics!). ■

Lansing Business Groups Urge Unity Following 2020 Election

BUSINESS LEADERS FROM THE BLACK BUSINESS ALLIANCE OF GREATER LANSING, the Greater Lansing Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, and the Lansing Regional Chamber of Commerce joined to urge unity and patience during and after the often contentious 2020 election.

Tens of millions of Americans voted by mail in this election cycle, raising concern about vote counting and verification. The business groups urged citizens to be patient during and after the election, while outcomes were being finalized. The three groups also encouraged collaboration in the political process post-election.

"We look forward to working together with our elected officials to ensure a strong and safe economic recovery, while working to build long-term prosperity for all Americans," the group said in a joint statement. ■

15th Annual Celebration of Regional Growth

INNOVATION AND GROWTH DURING A GLOBAL PANDEMIC

A CELEBRATION OF
REGIONAL GROWTH

The COVID-19 pandemic has forced lots of changes in the past few months. A global pandemic could not change the relentless drive for excellence and the spirit of innovation that have been the hallmark of growth in the Greater Lansing region. That spirit was evident during the 15th annual Celebration of Regional Growth (CORG) Awards, which recognized game-changing projects that are making a significant impact on the region. Though the COVID-19 pandemic forced the CORG Awards program to be held virtually on Dec. 1, it didn't impact the quality of the organizations and projects that were honored or the enthusiasm and energy of the annual event.

"The fact that we could have a Celebration of Regional Growth program amid a global pandemic is a testament to the resolute commitment and drive that has always existed in our region," said Tim Daman, president and CEO, Lansing Regional Chamber of Commerce (LRCC). "Despite all the barriers that have been placed in the way, our region continues to be a model of a determined will to overcome challenges, innovate solutions and work together to build a thriving region."

Honorees at the 15th annual CORG awards included: Coleman Road Extension (Dewitt Charter Township, City of East Lansing, Ingham County Board of Commissioners and Clinton County Board of Commissioners); Block 600 Development (Gillespie Group); Michigan State Capitol Restoration & Infrastructure (Capitol Commission); COVID-19 Innovation and Support (Sparrow). For the first time in the CORG program's history, a special recognition was made to small businesses as the Voices of Resiliency and Innovation during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Coleman Road- Dewitt Charter Township, City of East Lansing, Ingham County Board of Commissioners & Clinton County Board of Commissioners

A project that was two decades in the making became a reality in October 2020, when the ribbon was cut, officially opening a new section of Coleman Road running along the northern Ingham/southern Clinton County lines. The Coleman Road extension is expected to ease traffic congestion in the heavily traveled U.S. 127/Lake Lansing Road corridor. The new road will also open the area of hundreds of millions of dollars in further development.

"I think this extension will benefit all regions around us," said East Lansing Mayor Aaron Stephens. "It serves to provide more opportunities for better, more profitable development to happen."

The Coleman Road project could not gain much regional traction until a bipartisan coalition decided to make the project a regional priority. The Capital Council of Governments (CAPCOG), which includes Ingham, Eaton, and Clinton counties and LRCC and Michigan State University, joined with the Lansing Regional Chamber of Commerce to push for state funding project.

"It was the first time that our region came together, republicans, democrats, county, townships, and the business community rallying around one project that we advocated for at the state legislature," said Bob Showers, Clinton County Commissioner and chair of the CAPCOG board. "We are already seeing several great economic development opportunities that are happening along with the Coleman Road extension."

"People had the vision to put together a coalition in the region that really could make things happen in the political arena," said Dewitt Township Supervisor Rick Galardi.

Eventually, the Capital Caucus in the state legislature successfully worked with Governor Rick Snyder to secure a $7.6 million grant to fund the project.

The Coleman Road project is a critical investment that will support the growing financial services cluster along and near that corridor, including corporate headquarters for MSU Federal Credit Union, GreenStone Farm Credit Services, and Mercantile Bank. SET SEG recently opened its new corporate headquarters in the region.

There is a great deal of prime undeveloped land in the area expected to draw considerable interest from occupiers and developers. Among the potential developments could be a major office building, mixed-use at the corner of Coleman and Coolidge Roads, restaurants, retail, and possibly a hotel.

Block600 – The Gillespie Group

Just two years after the project was formally announced, The Gillespie Group's historic BLOCK600 project has come to fruition. The $40 million project includes a long-awaited downtown grocery store, 40 loft apartments, and a 122-room Courtyard by Marriott hotel. BLOCK600 is truly a game-changer for downtown Lansing.

Located at the southeast corner of East Michigan Avenue and South Larch Street, across from the newly renamed Jackson Field, BLOCK600 brings needed residential, grocery, and accommodation amenities to the Stadium District of downtown Lansing. Complete with a larger-than-life fruits, and vegetable mural by award-winning artist Brian Whitfield, The Capital City Market, a 37,000-square-foot urban grocer, designed and driven by Meijer, will provide fresh food, value, and convenience to residents, alleviating the area's reputation as a food desert.

VOICE OF SMALL BUSINESS

One of the most important stories during the COVID-19 pandemic was the courage, innovation, and entrepreneurial spirit demonstrated by small businesses throughout the region.

These 53 businesses have formed the foundation of our Voices of Small Business marketing campaign and we appreciate their commitment and courage to building a thriving region.

15TH ANNUAL CELEBRATION OF REGIONAL GROWTH

“The grocery store alone will change the traffic pattern dramatically, said Gillespie Group CEO Pat Gillespie. “You add a hotel that is most busy on weekends and nights. Those two will put pedestrians on the street. The whole area will feel a lot more alive.”

Residents began moving into the loft apartments portion of the development Oct. 9. The loft apartments will meet the growing population’s needs seeking the urban lifestyle experience that the Stadium District has to offer. Providing studio, one, and two-bedroom lofts directly connected to a grocery store and within walking distance of entertainment will give residents a home in the heart of downtown Lansing.

Construction on the hotel is ongoing, with an anticipated opening in spring 2021. Gillespie said he is excited to continue adding opportunities for urban living and new downtown dwellers to Lansing – specifically the Stadium District.

“Lansing is a vibrant community,” Gillespie said. “We wanted BLOCK600 to be a place where residents and visitors alike can experience what the Stadium District of downtown Lansing is all about. There was a time when it seemed like getting a market to support the downtown community was closer to a fairy tale than reality. I believe this is why the launch of this development is so rewarding. The need was great.”

Michigan State Capitol Restoration & Infrastructure – Capitol Commission

The Capitol Commission is being honored for $110 million in investments in Lansing’s most important downtown asset—the State Capitol. The investments include $70 million to upgrade the Capitol Complex’s aging infrastructure, and $40 million for Heritage Hall, an educational welcome center at the Capitol complex.

“The fact that we could have a Celebration of Regional Growth program amid a global pandemic is a testament to the resolute commitment and drive that has always existed in our region. Despite all the barriers that have been placed in the way, our region continues to be a model of a determined will to overcome challenges, innovate solutions and work together to build a thriving region.”

— Tim Daman, president and CEO, LRCC

The investment in infrastructure marks the first time in 30 years that the building’s heating and cooling systems, electrical systems, and other inner workings have been slated for an upgrade. The project includes a reworking of the heating and cooling system and a complete overhaul of the electrical and water systems

“When we started this project in 2017, we were facing a

140-year old building that had been totally neglected in terms of infrastructure,” said Gary Randall, chair of the Capitol Commission and clerk of the State House of representatives. “We had sewer lines that had broken under the building and water lines running alongside high voltage electrical lines.”

The project will result in a new infrastructure system on the southside of the Capitol. The project also includes the addition of 272 geothermal wells going down 500 hundred feet. They will heat and cool the building that Randall says will result in tremendous savings over a short time. Heritage Hall will feature a 35,000-square foot visitor center with a 500-seat auditorium. Heritage Hall will feature meeting spaces that can be separated into smaller, soundproofed rooms in addition to providing space for events, catering, and bus drop-offs. The hall could host educational exhibits, provide a safe bus stop for school field trips, space for receptions, and other catered events. The hall will be on one level and connect to the Capitol building by an elevator and lit partially with a sun three skylights that provide an impressive view of the Capitol dome.

“Visitors will see a building that is a mixture of today and yesterday,” said Randall. “There will be historical displays, meeting rooms and greatly increased security for both the Capitol and Heritage Hall. It will be a beautiful building that maintains the historical perspective of the Capitol building, but will also have its unique features.”

The State Capitol draws 250,000 visitors per year. Heritage Hall could attract as many as 100,000 additional visitors per year. Construction is expected to be completed in early 2022.

Innovation and Leadership During COVID - Sparrow

Sparrow has distinguished itself during the COVID pandemic as a national leader in testing and in its response to the virus, providing access to care to people throughout the state (and beyond).

Sparrow recently celebrated a milestone of performing more than 300,000 tests for COVID-19, becoming one of only a few hospital or private labs in Michigan to achieve that level. The health system is already well on its way to 400,000 tests and beyond.

“The work of the Sparrow Laboratories and our caregivers, under the most trying of circumstances, has been remarkable,” said James F. Dover, president and CEO, Sparrow Health System. “It has allowed Sparrow to become not only a national leader in testing, but it has helped the community better understand COVID-19 and the value of vigilance.

Sparrow has used innovation and resourcefulness to become a leader in providing personal protective equipment for caregivers, patients and visitors; limit the spread of the virus by imposing stringent visitor restrictions; and offer new ways to provide access to COVID-19 testing.

The huge testing numbers are fueled by the continued incredible popularity of the innovative Sparrow Laboratories Drive-Thru Services site at Frandor in Lansing. The location has received national media attention. Sparrow has added other drive-thru sites and has responded to the community’s needs with special testing events, such as at local churches.

And despite the large volumes, Sparrow’s turnaround time for tests is generally within 48 hours.

Sparrow’s list of innovations include: Manufacturing its own nasal swabs through 3-D technology; working with Michigan State University on a way to reprocess and repurpose N-95 face masks for caregivers; becoming the first hospital in Michigan to offer COVID-19 tests for inpatients.

Sparrow’s success during an unprecedented time in our nation’s history is due to the caregivers who above all else work to provide quality, compassionate care to every patient, every time.

“We take very seriously our role as the region’s only community-owned, community-based health system,” said Dover. “That’s why we’ve made it a priority to spread the message: Wear a mask. Save a life.”

Small Business: Voices of Resiliency and Innovation

The CORG Awards program served as the launch point for a new video campaign to showcase the role that many small business owners played during the COVID pandemic. The region’s small business community demonstrated great resiliency in surviving the COVID forced shutdown and in developing innovative solutions as a result of the challenges brought on by the pandemic (see accompanying article for full listing).

“I think the role the small business community has played in rising up during extremely trying times has been the most rewarding development to witness during a most challenging year,” said Daman. “Our small business community is second to none in the country, and that has never been more evident than during the past several months.”

2020 has been a year unlike any other. It has been a year of extraordinary challenges. We should all celebrate the fact that our region continues to flourish and thrive thanks to the entrepreneurial drive and commitment that makes Greater Lansing a world-class community in the midst of the turmoil and uncertainty. ■

Lansing Regional Chamber of Commerce Celebrates Small Business Saturday® with Local Small Businesses

THE LANSING REGIONAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE (LRCC) was honored to support the small business community in the tri-county region for Small Business Saturday, which took place Saturday, Nov. 28.

Created in 2010 by American Express, the annual observance occurs the Saturday after Thanksgiving and supports small businesses nationwide to create a local and positive economic impact during the holiday season.

“This year’s Small Business Saturday looked vastly different from years past,” said Michelle Rahl, vice president of member engagement, LRCC. “Our local small businesses have been severely impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic. We encouraged all shoppers to do a bulk of their holiday shopping locally and not only support our region’s businesses but keeping those dollars in our communities.”

Shopping small is making a difference and making an impact throughout our community. Sixty-two percent of U.S. small businesses reported that they need to see consumer spending return to pre-COVID levels by the end of 2020 to stay in business. The LRCC encouraged residents to visit local and independently-owned stores – particularly those with ‘Shop Small’ branding – on Small Business Saturday and purchase various goods and services.

“It was so important for us more than ever to participate in the Small Business Saturday campaign as more than 80% of our Chamber membership is comprised of small businesses with 15 employees or less,” said Rahl. “Our small business owners and entrepreneurs are the lifeblood and soul of our community and we are proud to support them through partnerships like Small Business Saturday.”

The LRCC supported Small Business Saturday as a “Neighborhood Champion,” which provides the organization with kits that were distributed to a handful of businesses. The kit consisted of branded materials, such as a banner and tote bag to drive traffic on Nov. 28.

The businesses that received the kits from the LRCC included:

- Moneyball – Okemos
- Kellie’s Consignments – Okemos
- Dusty’s Cellar – Okemos
- Peanut Shop – Downtown Lansing
- Kositckek’s – Downtown Lansing
- Preuss Pets – Old Town Lansing
- Bradly’s Home and Garden – Old Town Lansing
- Playmakers – East Lansing
- Country Stitches – East Lansing
- Capitol Discount – Lansing

Nov. 28 marked the eleventh annual Small Business Saturday. The annual observance supports local businesses that create jobs, boost the economy, and preserve neighborhoods. Small Business Saturday was created in 2010 in response to small business owners’ most pressing need: more customers. ■

The Race for 5G Will Impact National Security and Local Business

ACCORDING TO FORMER MICHIGAN CONGRESSMAN MIKE ROGERS, the worldwide race for supremacy in 5G will have a significant impact on the national security of the United States. Rogers says the impact will also be felt by local businesses as we incorporate the new smart technologies coming in the 5G world into every aspect of our lives. Rogers spoke about the 5G universe during a recent virtual Policy Forum hosted by the Lansing Regional Chamber of Commerce.

Rogers

“Now you will be able to get on your iPhone and adjust your HVAC, open your garage door, connect to your alarm system, and that is because there are sensors in all of those devices,” said Rogers.

According to Rogers, the threat imposed by the new technology is in the data generated that is of great value to thieves that want to get at that data. This includes countries that have what Rogers called nefarious intentions with the information they collect.

“By 2025, China has said they want to be data dominant,” said Rogers. “Guys like Vladimir Putin say that whoever owns the most data with the best artificial intelligence algorithms will win the next war.”

Rogers said officials in the U.S. Army said their number one concern for winning the next big adversarial fight is data and data management on the battlefield.

Rogers is working on national security issues in his role as the Vice Chairman of the Board at the MITRE Corporation and the David Abshire Chair at the Center for the Study of the Presidency and Congress. ■

Resiliency During the Global Pandemic

MAINTAINING A STRONG, POSITIVE OUTLOOK, caring for others, and caring for yourself are a means to maintaining a healthy perspective and resiliency during the COVID-19 pandemic. Those were the key takeaways from Dr. John Braccio, Ph.D. during the Lansing Regional Chamber's 2020 virtual Healthcare Forum on Nov. 12. The forum was moderated by WILS Radio personality, Dave Akerly.

Braccio

Dr. Braccio, who is a fully licensed psychologist for Regional Psychological Services acknowledged that many people are struggling emotionally because of the challenges they have been facing professionally and personally as a result of the pandemic.

“There is a lot of weariness, a lot of anxiety, and a lot of unknowns as to where we are headed,” said Dr. Braccio. “There are also some positives. People are making more connections with their families, with their spirituality and are taking a better look at their lives.”

Dr. Braccio said that maintaining a positive set of beliefs is essential to successfully navigate challenging times.

“That will make you far more positive and far more resilient during this time than if you think things aren't going to get better and the world is going to get worse,” said Dr. Braccio. “Because, then there is no future, and you can't enjoy the present.”

Dr. Braccio encouraged business owners and leaders to maintain a steady hand in running their business, especially dealing with their employees.

“If people approach themselves and their business from a position of honesty, transparency, and from wanting to help their employees, then the business has an excellent chance of survival,” said Dr. Braccio. “You need a culture where people feel comfortable, and people know you genuinely care for them.”

Braccio said that not only is it essential for leaders to care for their people, but they also need to care for themselves.

“Whatever role you are in the world, you need to take care of yourself physically, emotionally, and spiritually,” said Dr. Braccio. “If you don't do that, you are going to have a lot of issues.” ■

Recognizing the need to provide tools to assist with the stress caused by the pandemic, Foster Swift attorney Amanda Martin has put together a 'COVID-19 Checklist for Caregivers of Seniors' that lists the recommended steps senior caretakers should take to prepare for possible COVID-19-related illnesses among those they care for should the worst happen. This free downloadable checklist is available here or on the Elder Law Blog page at mielderlawblog.com.

We were pleased to have Tom Hamp of AdviCoach of Mid-Michigan as our virtual host sponsor, and he shared the many advantages of working with a business coach with the group. We were pleased to welcome Barb Whitney with the Lansing Art Gallery as our support sponsor. It was a great reminder to shop locally this holiday season. We look forward to a wonderful holiday Member Mixer, held virtually on December 8 and featuring WKAR as our host sponsor and The Peanut Shop as our support sponsor.
