

Hein-Sight Into County Government

County Executive Addresses Chamber Feb. 22

Ulster County's property tax levy is lower than it was in 2009 and County Executive Mike Hein fears that accomplishment is starting to get passé.

"It shouldn't be passé," Hein said. "It's a tremendous amount of hard work. I'm proud that we've been able to bring fiscal responsibility to county government in a way you simply do not see in governments.

"Do you know another government where property taxes are below what they were in 2009?"

Hein will discuss county property taxes—a popular topic with business leaders—and much more when he appears at the Chamber's monthly breakfast meeting on Feb. 22. The breakfast, scheduled for 7:30-9 a.m. at the Best Western Plus in Kingston, is sponsored by Villa Veritas Foundation Inc.

Under the recently adopted 2018 county budget, the property tax levy—or the amount to be raised from property owners—is $76.7 million. The levy was $77 million in 2010.

"There is this perception that government must either cost more money if you want to continue the same services or you have to cut services to stay at the same tax rate," Hein said. "I've never bought into that. I think that is a false perspective.

"The real answer here is you have to be willing to embrace innovation and change. If you are willing to embrace innovation and change and reinvent government regularly, then you have the ability to control costs and provide more services than ever before. That's the part that is a real point of pride for my administration."

Hein also noted that Ulster County's unemployment rate, which was 7.9 percent in 2009 at the height of the economic downturn, was 4.4 percent in December.

Helping out the local economy is a burgeoning film industry, which has received a boost from the state extending a

Building 1099 Has Bright Future

You'll Love LA at Feb. 27 Mixer

The possibilities are endless for an entrepreneur with the vision to make big things happen.

That's why the owners of Building 1099 (LA Kingston) on Ulster Avenue in the town of Ulster are opening up the structure for the Chamber's Feb. 27 Networking Mixer from 5:00–7:00 p.m.

Building owners Arthur and Lillian Nazginov are anxious to show off the longstanding, two-level building, which recently got a thorough makeover by the celebrated team at Dutton Architecture.

They firmly believe that those who come to the Mixer will see its potential as a retail showroom, furniture store, bank, restaurant or medical building.

"This building has a long list of amenities for its use, including energy-efficient lighting, multi-zone HVAC units, sprinklers, passenger-freight elevator and loading docks," said Lillian Nazginov.

"The lower level features a large showroom and storage area that has plenty of room for overstock or seasonal merchandise."

She and her husband bought the building, which formerly housed Brice Discount Beverage, with the intention of opening a furniture store but have since changed their plans.

Lillian and Arthur are from Queens but they maintain a second weekend home in Ulster County. They already operate an established furniture business and slip-covering venture in the city, which has a worldwide following. They initially thought about expanding in Ulster County but decided to re-consider since they already have such busy schedules.

Still, the Nazginovs realize they have a souped-up treasure and are looking to lease it to a visionary who can see beyond the empty walls.

"My husband is a handy man and is a frequent shopper at Home Depot," Nazginov said. "In 2013, the Brice building, which is situated across the road from Home Depot, closed its doors, and the building was put up for sale.

"We were looking to expand our furniture business by opening a showroom in a busy shopping location. This building is a perfect place as it is located in the heart of multiple national-brand retailers and, most importantly, there were no furniture stores in that vicinity."

Shortly after they purchased the building, the Nazginovs hired Scott Dutton and explained their vision to him.

"We wanted to expand the building to maximum square footage yet keep the original building design," she said. "It took time to get it right, but with Scott and his great team, it went smoothly."

Lillian called it a "top-notch" location with 10,556 square feet of prime retail space. To boot, Building 1099 is eco-friendly and sports a distinctive exterior with abundant glass to boost exposure.

Its floating appearance is by design and gives the building contemporary panache, creating a "strong impression" to passersby.

"We want people to see what we have done," she said of the upcoming Mixer. "It's one-of-a-kind!"

"We also want to show everyone what we have done and introduce ourselves to the local community," she said.

"I still think a furniture store would work great there. That would be a great location with great visibility and plenty of parking. We're looking to bring in a tenant who can appreciate what we have done."

The couple have nothing but high praise for Chris Smailer of Dutton Architecture and the others who contributed to the newly renovated building. For more information about Building 1099, go to www.ulsterholdings.com.

Complimentary refreshments will be available at the Feb. 27 Mixer, along with spirits from Miron Wine & Liquors. Steven Miron is graciously opening up additional parking for the event in front of his business in the adjoining Miron Liquor and Wine Plaza.

Chamber mixers are a great way to network and promote your business. Be sure to bring plenty of business cards. This free networking event is open to Chamber members and prospective members. Reservations are a must and can be made by calling the Chamber office at (845) 338-5100 or by registering online at www.ulsterchamber.org.

film production tax credit to Ulster and surrounding counties.

Productions that film in Ulster County were already eligible for a 30-percent tax credit for certain expenses. But last year, the state extended an additional 10-percent credit to Ulster and 11 other upstate counties.

“We fought and won a leveling of the playing field and a tax credit being extended for the Hudson Valley,” Hein said. “Not only has Ulster County benefitted, but surrounding counties have benefitted as well. It’s wonderful when you see an immediate impact.”

The Hudson Valley Film Commission announced recently that film production spending in the Hudson Valley was up 300 percent in 2017.

“That has not only impacted local hotels and restaurants, but also moved us in the direction of having actual productions take place locally when it comes to new media production and television series,” Hein said. “Those are the kinds of things that create tech-based jobs and construction work as well.”

Hein said he will also unveil plans to “impact generational poverty” in Midtown Kingston.

“We’re talking about investments in excess of $11 million in multiple programs,” he said. “We’re talking about creating access to a better future for many people who have been underserved and underprivileged for an extended period of time.”

Hein said he also will discuss the plan to integrate the county’s and city of Kingston’s bus systems.

Infrastructure improvements will be another breakfast topic, Hein said. The “Building A Better Ulster County” infrastructure program, which has invested $60 million over the last four years, will dedicate another $15 million in 2018 to road repaving.

“I’ll also be updating the Chamber on the most aggressive capital program the county has ever undertaken,” Hein said.

“I don’t see it so much as a speech, but rather a discussion with the business community and I really enjoy that,” Hein said.

“It’s a wonderful opportunity for people to get great insight into what’s going on in their government that has a direct impact on them. I’ve always firmly believed that what goes on in local government has the most direct impact on our citizens’ day-to-day lives.”

Hein, a Democrat, was elected Ulster County’s first executive in November 2008 after residents voted to change the county form of government. He formerly served as county administrator and also worked in the county treasurer’s office.

Chamber breakfast programs are a great way to network with other local business leaders and stay on top of current events. Pre-registration is strongly encouraged. For more information or to register, call the Chamber at (845) 338-5100 or go online at www.ulsterchamber.org.

Cornell Cooperative, Chamber Go Way Back

Lydia Reidy has been Executive Director of Cornell Cooperative Extension of Ulster County for 28 years and has worked for the organization for 42, but that all came to an end last month.

“It’s been quite the run,” Reidy said. “I’ll probably remain involved in some ways. I have grandchildren that are now involved in the 4-H youth development program, so I’ll make sure I help them out.”

“If the organization needs me to help out in some way, I’ll fit that into my busy retired schedule.”

Reidy stepped down at the end of January. Her successor, Jared Buono, has already been on the job since the first of the year and assumed the position of Executive Director February 1st.

Cornell Cooperative Extension of Ulster County was formed in 1913 and people may not know the history it shares with the Chamber.

“The Ulster Chamber of Commerce was a major sponsor in getting Cornell Cooperative Extension going in Ulster County and we’ve been cooperating ever since,” Reidy said.

Today, Cornell Cooperative Extension offers resources, tools and education through the following program areas: agriculture, horticulture, 4-H youth development, healthy communities and the Ashokan Watershed Stream Management Program.

“We are part of Cornell and the land grant system through the country,” Reidy said. “We have access to research that’s being done in any of those land grants.”

“Agriculture is big business in Ulster County and has been since its inception. I think we play a large part in making sure that the production and cultural practices that are being researched are translated back to our growers.”

Reidy said people would be surprised at the amazing amount of agriculture here.

“At least 10 percent of all the land in Ulster County is involved in active agriculture,” she said, “and we’re a big county, bigger than the state of Rhode Island.

“That provides somewhat of a challenge sometimes in being able to provide the expertise that you need in all the different commodities.”

Apples—an important agricultural staple for the entire state—are the largest and most popular commodity grown here.

“There’s definitely a need for the apples that we grow here in lots of different ways,” Reidy said. “There has been a burgeoning market for cider and hard cider lately.”

Reidy said vegetables, most notably sweet corn, are the most popular commodity after apples.

“We also have a lot of interest in organic and we provide a lot of help in that for growers who are interested in growing crops organically,” she said.

Ulster County was once home to an abundance of dairy farms, but there was a buyout in the 1970s, Reidy said.

“Most of our dairy farms left,” she said. “We have about five active milking dairy farms left, but a lot of that land was perfect for raising livestock so there has been a lot of interest in the last 10 years of more folks getting involved in poultry, swine, sheep and goats. We have quite a few beef cattle in the county.

“These are things people might not see in their travels unless they’re looking

More Than the Best Darn Milk Around

Stewart's Evolves, Makes Improvements

The roots of your local Stewart's Shop are in ice cream, but the nearly 100-year-old company has evolved over time to meet the changing needs of its customers. "Each decade our approach has broadened—adding gas, milk, coffee and other beverages," says Maria D'Amelia, the company's public relations specialist. "Now much of the company growth can be attributed to the increased demand for easy food to grab on the go."

D'Amelia said to make the latest changes, Stewart's has made investments in building, replacing and remodeling its shops.

"Our 2016 and 2017 construction seasons each tallied $50 million," she said.

In 2017, D'Amelia said Stewart's built two new shops, 12 replacement shops and completed 30 major remodels.

"The new, larger shops allow for a better flow inside, to improve the customer's shopping experience," D'Amelia said.

"The added space also allows us to expand our food service options.

"Easy food options are fueling many of these projects throughout the company as we evolve to meet the needs of our customers' busy lifestyles. They're looking for quick, quality foods they can easily grab throughout the day."

One of those projects was at 1872 Ulster Ave. in Lake Katrine, where a new shop was built to replace a previous building.

This larger store features all of the favorite Stewart's products, along with freshly made pizza (pie and by the slice), made-to-order subs, a walk-in cooler called a "beer cave," plus plenty of seating, expanded parking and fuel service.

In honor of this shop's opening, Stewart's made a $1,000 donation to E.R. Crosby Elementary School in Lake Katrine.

D'Amelia said the Chamber has held grand-opening ribbon-cuttings for Stewart's, while connecting the company to events and serving as a resource.

"The Chamber enhances our support of the communities, as we strive to give back," she said.

The company has been around for quite some time.

In 1921, brothers Percy W. and Charles V. Dake began making Dake's Delicious Ice Cream at a farm in Greenfield, N.Y.

In 1945, the brothers purchased a dairy and ice cream business from Don Stewart (hence the origin of the name Stewart's Shops).

At the front of the dairy plant was a small store that became the first Stewart's Ice Cream Shop.

The company takes pride in offering customers fresh and local products, particularly milk and ice cream.

Stewart's milk is produced by 30 local dairy farms from Saratoga, Rensselaer and Washington counties—all located close to the Stewart's dairy in Greenfield, where it's bottled.

Stewart's trucks then deliver that milk to the shops—all within 48 hours of leaving the farm.

pretty closely, but there is a lot of really interesting work going on in being able to provide food locally for people working in restaurants and that kind of thing.”

Reidy said the Buy Local movement—championed by the Chamber—along with people wanting to know where their food is grown, has been a boon for Ulster County.

“If you’re interested in that kind of thing, this is a great county to live in because we have a lot of agriculture and we can provide that,” she said. “The rise of farmers markets over the years has been really amazing and the response from the local population to those has been great.

“We also have a lot of farmers who have markets in New York City.”

Reidy said taxes make the cost of doing business high for New York farmers and locals should support them.

“That’s why you really want to support your local farmers and make sure they stay in business and are profitable. We want them to stay here and provide those wonderful crops for us,” she said.

“We have been able to keep a lot of the land in agriculture. We have several communities that want to make sure they don’t lose that rural character.”

The company's commitment to freshness has gotten widespread notice. Stewart's has earned New York State's Best Milk distinction, which was awarded by Cornell University's Department of Food Science.

It was selected based on samples of whole milk, 2 percent, 1 percent and fat-free milk. The milk was scored on a variety of criteria, including best flavor.

Stewart's crews often say that the only way to get fresher milk is to buy one's own cow.

Of course, that prize-winning milk is used to make Stewart's ice cream, which comes in a variety of flavors in half-gallons or by the cone at the counter.

The company's dairy, ice cream plant and warehouse cover more than 5 acres just outside Saratoga Springs.

"This is where we make our high-quality products, including fresh milk, ice cream, refresher drinks and juices, and also where our Stewart's kitchen is located," D'Amelia said.

The facility expanded recently to produce several varieties of hot foods such as chili, macaroni and cheese, soups and meatballs.

Entrees like chicken Alfredo, penne marinara and meatloaf with mashed potatoes can be purchased frozen, refrigerated or hot and ready.

"We're also making chef and chicken Caesar salads, deli salads and yogurt and pudding parfaits," she said.

"We manufacture and distribute 75 percent of what we sell. The partners in our shops are better able to support our customers, thanks to the support they receive from the plant and distribution center."

Aside from the products, it is the people who make Stewart's Shops a trusted place in the neighborhood to pick up a loaf of bread or doughnut and coffee on-the-go.

At a time when other businesses are automating jobs by replacing people with ATMs and self-checkouts, and where online purchasing is growing, D'Amelia said Stewart's remains focused on its employees.

They are called "partners" because they own nearly 40 percent of the company through a profit-sharing plan.

"Ownership and job stability have enhanced the uniquely pleasant atmosphere in our shops," she said.

"The friendly atmosphere we have in our shop provides a comfortable way for our customers to communicate with us.

"They are sharing their likes, dislikes, product requests—you name it. We also engage with our customers through our presence on social media, and with our customer service department."

On top of everything, Stewart's is committed to giving back to the communities that support the 70 shops in upstate.

The company donates $2.5 million a year to local charities, including the Holiday Match program, and that doesn't even include the family foundations, according to D'Amelia.

"This is a team effort between the shops and our customers, as we match their donations (usually spare change) penny for penny," she said. "There are no administrative costs. It's amazing to see how that change adds up!"

"We are not just a business. We are your neighbor. At Stewart's Shops we say, 'We're closer to you,' and that carries many meanings. It's proximity, convenience, our products and services, our people—and it's our contribution back to the communities where our shops are located."

Stewart's Shops Corp., with several area locations, can be reached at P.O. Box 435, Saratoga Springs, NY 12866. You can also call (518) 581-1201 or go to www.stewartsshops.com.
