Title: Rural and Small Urban Transit Service Design for the Future: The Art and Science, Ken Hosen and Todd Hansen, KFH Group, Inc.

Location: McAllen Convention Center, Sunday, 1:00-5:00 pm

Description: The theory and practice of rural transit service design has changed dramatically since the 1990s. Innovations in service designs and technology have driven these changes. Unfortunately, many rural systems are still operating 1990s services and losing out on potential ridership. The developments over the last five years tell us it is time to think in the year 2024 and use the combination of proper service design/planning and the appropriate technologies to enhance service, improve ridership and raise the stature of your system.

This introductory workshop, part of a series on rural transit service design, is focused on the basic theories that drive ridership in rural and small urban areas. All of the designs reviewed are proven in the rural transit world and many examples in Texas and across the country will be cited. The workshop will give the participants an understanding of the most appropriate 2024 service designs/options. Each of the service designs will be discussed in the context of the wide variety of service areas.

The last part of the workshop will include an exercise where participants will be able to apply what they learned in the presentation. The presenter will select an example of a real rural system and have all the participants review the service and apply the lessons learned in the session.

Title: Workplace Impairment Training- April Ramos, Program Manager, NSC

Location: McAllen Convention Center, Sunday, 1:00-4:30 pm

Description:

This interactive, scenario-based course introduces a six-step process for responding to potential impairment in the workplace. Participants will explore how the scope of impairment has expanded to include a wide range of issues such as drugs and alcohol, over-the-counter medications, fatigue, stress, and mental distress.

The course addresses critical questions, including: What is the relationship between impairment and workplace safety? What factors and situations can cause impairment? What are the common signs and symptoms of impairment? How should I respond when observing impairment in the workplace? What are the impacts and costs of employee impairment on a company's bottom line? What resources are available to help recognize and address impairment in my workplace?

Title: Managing Operational and Capital Costs at Rural and Small Urban Transit Systems, Michael Walk, TTI

Location: McAllen Convention Center, Sunday, 1:00-5:00 pm

Description:

In an era of rising costs, Texas rural and small urban transit agencies require effective knowledge, practices, and tools to manage operational and capital expenses. This workshop condenses 2.5 days of content developed by TTI with support from TxDOT into a focused training session. Participants will gain an overview of the Guidebook and Online Course, both available at no cost, and will explore foundational concepts in cost management, including transit cost drivers, cost analysis, and reporting. The course also addresses strategies for managing directly operated labor and fuel expenses, as well as vehicle-related costs such as maintenance and replacement.
