The Zionsville Chamber of Commerce is proud to serve our member businesses for 60 years strong. This year, as we celebrate our Diamond Jubilee, we have dedicated this edition of About Town to the past, present and future of Zionsville and the chamber.

Here are some of the great things the chamber accomplished in 2020:

- We had a social media reach of more than 2 million. We highlight businesses on Facebook, Instagram, through videos, sponsored social media series, through our various websites and in person.
- We have been developing programs for our members, such as a new blog and podcast feature.
- We implemented a new Microgroup program that distills our membership down into practice groups and "neighborhoods" to better listen to the needs of our members and act rapidly.
- We have a new ShopZionsvilleChamber.com page. Find items from our retail members all in one place and support local business even when shopping online.
- We have created the 'Keep the Lights On' campaign, a Facebook Live experience, to assist Members through the COVID crisis. It has received more than 30,000 views and has resulted in numerous sales from new and existing customers.
- We now offer health insurance and additional programs to our members.

- We have a new online-only gift card program that makes it easier for people to shop with chamber members. Find it on our website, zionsvillechamber.org, under the gift card tab.
- We were named the 2020 ICEA Excellence in Communications Regional Award Winner for Marketing Campaigns. Our members get the best in marketing from the ZCoC.
- We have great things coming and look forward to you being a part of it all. Here are some of the great changes for 2021:

GetMarriedInZionsville.com –The chamber is looking to encourage large groups to come see, experience, dine and shop around Zionsville while attending a wedding scheduled in this beautiful town. Website launching in early 2021, as well as a bridal event highlighting our bridalrelated businesses.

Business Services Lists - We want to better serve and encourage use of service-related businesses. These lists will be focused on real estate services (both moves and relocations), senior services and starting or relocating a business/business services.

We are also celebrating our 60th anniversary all year in photos, events and surprises. Join us for the journey.

Welcome to Zionsville and this year's About Town guide.

Entrepreneurial spirit, top-rated schools, low tax rates, walkability, 500-plus acres of greenspace ... Zionsville has a rich culture, collaborative leadership, undeniable momentum and a desirable sense of place. Businesses that choose to locate in Zionsville see that we are not only a town that is open for business, but this is great place to raise a family with an excellent school system, a vibrant downtown and a "we welcome all" commitment.

Zionsville is home to one of only eight Indiana schools named a 2020 Blue Ribbon School and the seventh-ranked high school in the state (US News & World Report). We are a family friendly, close-knit community with all the amenities of larger towns and cities: parks, trails, restaurants, shops and cultural attractions.

During a time that has certainly brought its challenges as a result of the pandemic, you will find that Zionsville neighbors are a group of citizens, organizations and businesses all coming together for the common goal of building a thriving community. I am proud of our community and the resilience we have shown.

As a community, we strive to balance embracing innovative growth and protecting the sense of place our residents cherish. As mayor, I am happy to welcome you to town.

How shopping locally affects a community

By Jarred Meeks

During the COVID-19 pandemic, Zionsville residents shopped locally to support town businesses, a trend many town officials and business owners hope will continue.

Allyson Gutwein, executive director of the Zionsville Chamber of Commerce, said shopping locally strengthens a community.

"The whole idea of shopping locally really allows people to bring things into their home and bring things into the lives of those they surround themselves with that are unique and different," Gutwein said. "Whenever you spend money at a local business, that money often stays local because oftentimes our local suppliers also get their supplies locally. They shop locally. They themselves are dining locally."

A study conducted by American Express found 0.67 cents of every dollar spent in a community stays in a community, Boone County Economic Development Corp. Executive Director Molly Whitehead said. As a result, Boone County and Zionsville officials attempted to bolster Zionsville businesses throughout the COVID-19 pandemic with several initiatives.

The Boone County EDC launched its Propel Microloan Program, which infused more than $133,000 dollars into the community. The Town of Zionsville created Enrichment Grants, allowing the town to choose local businesses that would benefit from an influx of money to help build websites, secure personal protective equipment and fill other crucial needs. The Zionsville Chamber of Commerce also hosted "A Night on the Bricks" and other socialdistanced events that attracted customers to local stores and restaurants.

"Knowing we are making a concerted effort and those around us are making a concerted effort to keep money in our community allows our community to grow - not only (to allow) our businesses to grow but to allow people who want to stay and play and live here to see this vibrant community that is well supported," Gutwein said. "And overall, that's important whenever you come into a community to visit and you see it is vibrant. The stores are strong, the people who are working there are happy. All of that leads to a much stronger-looking business community that people want to come back to."

Tania Roudebush, owner of Black Dog Books, said many Zionsville businesses are unique models that can't be duplicated at a commercial level. Her bookstore, for example, sources books from local authors, often giving a first chance to reach a local audience.

Leigh Ann Akard, co-owner of Akard True Value Hardware, said the relationship between local customers and local businesses is cyclical.

"You don't see those big boxes and Amazon sponsoring your Little League team and your PTO and the band and all of the local things that make your community," Akard said. "When you go to a silent auction, you might see a gift card or something, but it doesn't have the same impact. (Shopping) locally kept people during a pandemic working close to home. We employ everyone from people working their first job to people doing their job after they've retired. We do so much more than sell hardware and employ people. We give a community. We give a family to some. It truly is (a situation where) you are not buying a CEO their second lake house and car. You are paying for someone to take dance lessons and buy their ballet shoes.

"It truly is money reinvested in the community."

New workspace 'normal' still to be determined

By Jarred Meeks

At the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic, many businesses closed their offices, forcing employees to work remotely. Now, as the pandemic wanes, employers must define what the new normal will be and whether working from home is here to stay.

Jon Gilman, founder and CEO of Clear Software, said the Zionsville-based company's employees have been, for the most part, working remotely since the start of the pandemic. The company specializes in creating enterprise software and cross-system integrations, and Gilman said the firm is fortunate to be able to operate remotely. He said it has been a blessing, considering many companies do not have the same opportunity and need to be at an office or in a fulfillment warehouse.

"People have talked about this being the new normal, and I guarantee you with 100 percent certainty this is not the new normal," Gilman said. "When people get vaccinated, they're going to come back to work. I know Google, literally a year ago, was saying people never have to come back to work. They can work from home for the rest of their careers. Now, they are reversing course and saying, 'OK, we're all coming back to the office."

Gilman said one of the reasons employees will need to return to offices is because research and development, particularly at technology companies, has suffered in the past year. He said imagining collaborative, new ideas is not possible, long-term, through Zoom calls or other virtual meeting spaces.

"You don't get that eye-to-eye contact and camaraderie that is necessary to generate new ideas," Gilman said. "R&D has suffered across the board, so when people return to the office, it's going to pick up. A lot of tech companies have lost a year of high-quality R&D and are just trying to get by until we can get people together again."

Gilman said technology companies like Google set trends other businesses eventually follow. For example, technology firms were among the first companies to utilize open-floor spaces in offices with no cubicles. The concept was copied, but companies slowly discovered extroverted employees disproportionately benefited from the layout, Gilman said.

"Introverts like having a closed-off space where they can think and not be disrupted by the sounds of everybody else," Gilman said. "So, they kind of went to the hybrid model, which is (where) some people have offices in cubicles but some people like to work in an open-floor plan, and I think that's another thing started by Google.

"We all do what Google does eventually."

Molly Whitehead, executive director of the Boone County

Mona Ruby, an employee of Fivethirty home, paints furniture at the store. Ruby said she has worked at the store during the COVID-19 pandemic. (Photo by Jarred Meeks)

Economic Development Corp., said office environments might adopt a hybrid office plan, allowing employees to work from home more often than before the COVID-19 pandemic while still maintaining a larger office space for collaborative meetings.

"It is yet to be determined what the long-term impact may be on available space for office users," Whitehead said. "We know that there has been a decent amount of subleasing activity out on the market because people just aren't using as much space. Whether that (will) be long-term or not is still to be determined, but I suspect the hybrid model will catch on, and that will impact users' needs over time."

Although technology companies will likely need to schedule in-person, collaborative meetings. Whitehead said they will not be needed every day, likely meaning employees will be granted more flexibility as to where they can work.

Allyson Gutwein, executive director of the Zionsville Chamber of Commerce, said the work-from-home culture ushered in by the pandemic has changed office work space.

"This year, I think, has been an evolution of what a work space really looks like," Gutwein said. "There has been a lot of grace given there with dress codes and how people really embrace the fact that everything is a little more casual. People weren't wearing suits on a Zoom call, so everyone has changed the way they look at what work really looks like in this last year. I think that change has brought on a change in all kinds of things. What we now consider a workspace looks very different.

"If it was your kitchen table with your refrigerator in the background and your kids' drawings on the wall, that's now part of the new normal."

Adaptability keeps chamber businesses sustainable

By Jarred Meeks

The Zionsville Chamber of Commerce celebrates its 60th anniversary this year, a milestone marking six decades of advocating for and informing and connecting Zionsville businesses. During those years, many member businesses have relocated, changed names or closed, but some have proven they can adapt and meet market demands to remain viable.

Akard's True Value Hardware, for example, opened in Zionsville more than six decades ago. In 1955, J.J. Akard bought Zionsville Hardware and changed the name. The business first opened on Zionsville's Main Street and later moved to the Boone Village Shopping Center in the late 1970s, where it remains today, at 25 Boone Village.

In 2020, the owners opened a companion shop called

Akard

Back to the Bricks in its original location on Main Street, celebrating the business' legacy. Co-owner Leigh Ann Akard said the secret to longevity is adaptability.

"It's adapting your sails to catch the wind of change," Akard said. "And we saw the most change in this last year. We have a saying around the store, 'Fail fast.' Fail fast, but don't be afraid to try it. But if it's not right, fail fast and try something new. Just because you unlock the doors and turn on the lights, it doesn't mean people know who you are or how long you've been in business and what you've been doing, hence the reason we came down here for the Back to the Bricks (shop)."

Akard said she frequently meets new customers who are unaware her business has served the Zionsville community for more than 60 years. During that time, many businesses in the community have failed, making available new markets and revenue sources, Akard said.

"I think it's a matter of figuring out where the niches are and trying to fill them but doing it quickly and realizing what's working and what's not," Akard said.

Another business, Brown's Antiques & Lampshade Store, has been at its original location, 315 N. 5th St., since Marshall and Mary Jane Brown first opened the store in 1945 in their Zionsville home on 5th Street and expanded it to adjacent buildings.

David Brown, their son and the second-generation owner of the business, said it started as an antique shop but eventually began offering more products in the 1970s. The store now sells not only antiques, but also vinyl records, books and what David said is the largest collection of replacement lampshades in the Indianapolis region. The business also specializes in lamp repairs.

"Until the last five years, we've been open seven days a week for 75 years," said Brown, adding that the business is now open Monday through Saturday. "Being open is No. 1. It's hard to sell something if you're not open."

Brow said the best way owners can ensure their businesses stay open is to keep expenses low, especially in the first years after opening.

"So many people, they have this dream and they're all excited, but they have to understand expenses have to be paid for by product sales, and sales aren't always as much as you hope they might be," Brown said. "And that's one of the reason's we have been successful is because we have this in our backyard, so to speak."

For Brown, another key aspect of maintaining a sustainable business is preparing for uncertainties.

"We have been (through) so many ups and downs over the years," he said. "We are just used to it. About the time you think you've got this business figured out and you know how to make money, something comes up.

"If something's not working, you have to be willing to alter your game plan and try something else."

Zionsville micro-distillery offers array of tours

By Anna Skinner

Zionsville resident Mark Nigbur has plenty of experience distilling alcoholic spirits. He began distilling in Colorado in the early 2000s and eventually moved to Hawaii to establish a distillery on Maui. In August 2020, he opened Alchemy Spirit House at 640 S. Main St. and brought his distillery experience to Zionsville.

Since opening, Nigbur has offered not only craft cocktails and bottle sales, but also unique experiences behind the scenes. Alchemy Spirit House offers three tours.

A 45-minute tour walks up to 10 guests through the entire distilling process every Sunday. Cost is $10 per guest, who can partake in a tasting experience with Nigbur after the tour.

"We go through the entire distilling process from fermentation to distillation to hand bottling and blending in house," Nigbur said.

A Mixology 101 class also is offered and runs for an hour to an hour and a half every Saturday. It also has a maximum capacity of 10 guests. Nigbur compares the mixology sessions to classes at Sur la Table in Carmel.

"We provide all the barware, and they make two to three cocktails that they make themselves with just a tutorial from me," Nigbur said.

The Mixology 101 class is $60 per person.

The longest class Nigbur offers is an infusions class, which runs three hours and costs $150. Alchemy Spirit House has four stills for distilling, so attendees can make either one bottle per person if they're single or one bottle per couple if they come as a couple.

"You get a full tutorial of the botanicals we have and what they do for flavors, how the esters are released in water or high-proof alcohol and they have a full recipe card, and they choose how they want to make their bottle," Nigbur said. Alchemy Spirit House has 32 botanicals attendees can use to flavor their alcohol, including bergamot, cinnamon, star anise, cumin and juniper berries.

Nigbur began offering the experience when the microdistillery opened in 2020.

"We opened the first of August and started the experiences around November," Nigbur said.

Nigbur said he offered tours at his distillery in Maui, too.

"We did tours and a different format for the Mixology 101, but the infusions classes are all new," Nigbur said. "I've trained a lot of people on how to infuse."

To reserve a class, visit alchemymicrodistillery.com.

ATTEND A CLASS

Mixology 101 class: $60 per person, includes two to three cocktails. Offered on Saturdays. Must reserve spot in advance.

Infusions class: $150, add $49 if you want to bring a partner. One take-home bottle per couple. Visit the website to reserve a time.

Alchemy tour: $10 per person, including a private tasting. Tours are at 4 p.m. Sundays and must be booked in advance.

Community supports ZCS during pandemic

By Jarred Meeks

Zionsville Community Schools was one of the first school districts in Indiana to halt in-person classes in March 2020 because of the COVID-19 pandemic, and the Zionsville community quickly rallied to support not only the schools but the students and families affected.

"The word that comes to mind about this entire experience is that this resourceful community has been resourceful and that they've been responsive," ZCS Supt. Scott Robison said. "They assisted our students but also our faculty and staff. Parents were responsive in answering about their needs. It's been a very happy experience but also a tragic year for too many. So many folks stepped up."

Robison said that when the school district sought substitute teachers, many people answered the call. When mandatory quarantines among school transportation staff threatened to close schools, the Town of Zionsville lent a certified employee to help ensure the district's buses ran efficiently. The Community Foundation of Boone County surprised ZCS officials and officials from other Boone County school districts with a $50,000 grant for personal protective equipment and sanitization products to assist the schools with reopening.

When schools first closed to in-person classes and transitioned to e-learning schedules, many students and families who rely on the school's meals faced food insecurity. In response, ZCS officials coordinated an effort to provide meals even when students were not attending school.

In March 2020, ZCS found other ways to give back. The district received a request from Ascension St. Vincent, which partners with ZCS, for sanitizing products. ZCS officials quickly responded with the needed products. ZCS officials also coordinated with local food banks to help keep their shelves full.

"We also had some perishable things that we had already purchased that were going to go bad, that our own families didn't really come to claim or want because we have relatively low, free and reduced lunch," Robison said. "But we serve those folks, and when we have leftovers, rather than let them perish, we got it to all of the food banks.

"We had bus drivers out driving their buses and delivering food in kind of the strangest Door Dash ever. It was a coordinated effort to make use of those supplies and resources we had when people needed them."

The Zionsville Education Foundation granted $127,000 to Zionsville Community Schools teachers and schools to fund innovative and creative projects designed to enrich students' educational experiences. Above, ZCS teachers pause with certificates of their ZEF grants.

In 2020, The Zionsville Education Foundation granted $127,000 to Zionsville teachers and schools to fund innovative and creative projects designed to enrich students' educational experiences.

Zionsville Education Foundation Executive Director Lyle Brown said teachers were forced to reimagine every aspect of their jobs, educating themselves to educate students in ways they had never done before. Brown said ZCS is the lowest-funded school district per student in Indiana.

"(The grants) are thanks to our community," Brown said. "That is truly possible because our community supports the schools and supports ZEF."

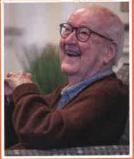

"I think anyone who works or lives here understands what a great community it is," Robison said. "It is a community that seems to know how to leverage its resources and advantages of good communication and coordination and folks wanting the right things to happen. I think it typifies that, but certainly, this was the first crisis of its kind that I think anyone has experienced in their lives, and it was great to see people did step up.

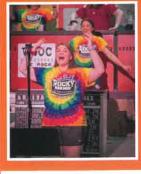

"Organizations are only as good as the people they have available to them. I take away from this that people have a lot more capacity than they know they do, so that caused us to have a suitable capacity to serve the community as best we could during this time."

At Zionsville UMC, people are the center of our mission. We aren't all alike, but we are united in living out our lives as followers of Jesus. Each person in our church family is like you — full of hopes and dreams, needs and joys. We are all at various stages in our spiritual life. We are OK with that. In fact, we think it is God's plan that we are a place for all kinds of people. We'd love to have you join us for one of our Sunday gatherings. Sunday Services are at 9:30am and 11:00am and are available both in-person and live stream via our website and Facebook page.

The pandemic brought new and unique challenges for schools, but our community showed what it means to come together for our youth. Thank you to our students, staff, families, community members, local business owners and school partners. We couldn't do what we do without your support.

We are in this together.
