Who We Are

The Denver Metro Building Owners and Managers Association (BOMA) is a trade association representing one of the largest and most revenue-generating industries in the state: Commercial real estate. In Colorado, commercial real estate contributes approximately $1.5 billion to the state's economy; generates nearly $500 million in new taxable personal earnings and supports nearly 35,000 jobs.

»» BOMA's Mission

The Denver Metro Building Owners and Managers Association advances the commercial real estate industry through advocacy, professional development and the exchange of knowledge.

🏠 BOMA Saves $$

BOMA membership saves owners money through advocacy efforts. BOMA adds value to your properties and benefits your tenants and the real estate professionals who guide and care for your investment.

BOMA dues are usually treated as a building operating expense and cost your building less than a penny per sq ft – a minimal price for the ROI!

🏛️ BOMA Advocacy

BOMA provides savings in dollars and time to property owners and managers through ongoing advocacy efforts. We are the only commercial real estate organization that has a seat at the International Codes Council, and Denver Metro BOMA played an integral part in the most recent Denver building and fire code amendment process.

BOMA also works with the local and state jurisdictions on various issues related to permitting, elevator codes, energy efficiency, and many other commercial real estate development and owner issues.
